IRA Makes Peace, Ready for War

By HAROLD MORRISON from Belfast

The mounting death toll in Ulster may be only the first flash of what some Roman Catholic militants describe as a "waking volcano."

The militant, outlawed Irish Republican Army now is reported to have reconciled its opposing factions in renewed determination to oust the British forces from Northern Ireland.

Announcement of the reconciliation was made in Dublin by a senior IRA leader.

Previously the two main divisions of the IRA — the Provisionals and the Officials — were at each other's throats.

The Officials are generally left-wing and less inclined to violence than to working politically. The Provisionals are hardened militants seeking to unite the North and South through force.

It is known in Belfast that Jim Sullivan, a top leader among the officials, has so far escaped capture and is directing most night attacks against the troops.

There are reports that many Catholic men are evacuating their families from Belfast in preparation for a showdown with Protestants, police and the armed forces.

Whatever the reason, evacuation has reached an alarming rate. As many as 7,000 refugees have streamed south into the Irish Republic, severely straining the resources of the state's three million inhabitants.

The Belfast Telegraph says evacuation of both Catholics and Protestants has reached a point demanding immediate attention by the authorities. There was a growing need for food supplies, accommodation and relief workers.

The troops barricaded in sandbagged lookouts, grip their rifles and sub-machine-guns tensely. They appear weary and often angry as

Gunman Dies In Shoot-out

LONDONDERRY (CP) — Bursts of gunfire rang out over Londonderry's embattled Bogside area Thursday night and one gunman was killed in a street-corner shoot-out with a British army patrol.

The death brought to 25 the number killed since trouble erupted in Northern Ireland Monday and occurred when the British patrol returned fire after being ambushed.

Despite the death, this tense city seemed to have escaped the mass violence that had been feared on a day of traditional Roman Catholic-Protestant clashes.

Derry was relatively peaceful, like the riot-torn Ulster capital of Belfast, into early evening after three days of bombings, burnings and shotings.

Groups milled around mostly in the predominantly Catholic Bogside, occasionally clashing with heavily armed British troops posted here in an attempt to keep law and order.

No one here knew why this was a quiet day after riots throughout the six Northern Ireland counties since the Ulster government Monday swooped down on the illegal Irish Republican Army and took in 300 suspects subject to indefinite internment without trial.

This was what touched off the latest wave of violence, which had its origins in a

Lillooet Blaze Razes Reserve

LILLOOET (CP)—Donations of food, clothing and bedding flowed into the Lillooet Indian band Thursday as volunteer firefighters battled a blaze that had destroyed most of the No. 1 reserve and threatened the town the night before.

The sudden forest blaze covering about 600 acres had moved up to a mountain notch at the 5,000-foot level west of town Thursday afternoon.

Columns of smoke poured high into the air over the Fraser Canyon village, turning the sun a yellowish brown.

Forest ranger John Wanderer said he was not yet certain the blaze won't head back from the mountain toward Lillooet.

At least 50 Indians were left homeless after the fire wiped out 10 homes on the reserve 1½ miles south of here. Only three homes were saved.

Citizens of Lillooet came rapidly to the aid of the Indians, some of whom had been housed at another community 10 miles to the north.

"We helped each other last night and we'll do the same today and tomorrow," said Mayor Johnder Basran.

Temperatures of more than 100 degrees were not helping.

"We know the fire could jump a guard when whipped by a strong wind," said a forest service spokesman "We can only hope the fire eventually burns itself out behind the guards."

Jim Scotchman, chief of the Indian band, said residents of the reserve had little warning of the fire.

Ten homes were lost on the reserve, plus a church. About three dwellings, a recently-completed community centre and a vacant auto court on the outskirts of Lillooet were also destroyed

The village itself escaped damage when about 100 firefighters turned back the fire after it had raced 1½ miles

Canoe Pageant Finishes Here

Beauty, Drama and Gaiety

By JIM BRAHAN

Beauty, drama and gaiety were all part of the colorful finish to B.C.'s Centennial '71 canoe pageant Thursday night at Victoria's Inner Harbor as more than 5,000 spectators roared approval when Manitoba was declared the winning team.

Shortly after 7 p.m. the 12 Voyageur canoes, representing each of the provinces, the Northwest Territories and the Yukon, lined up abreast of the Causeway and delighted the crowd by singing happy birthday to British Columbia.

After a brief ceremony involving provincial and civic dignitaries at wharfside, a tension-filled hush fell over the throng lined three-deep along the causeway, the CPR wharf, the Black Ball ferry wharf and also the docks at Ocean Cement.

The water boiled at the crack of the starting pistol as 72 paddles flashed into a harbor turned golden by the setting sun and the 25-foot canoes streaked for the turn that would take them to the Johnson Street bridge.

There was a jam at the turn and one of the Yukon crew paddled himself right out of the canoe into the water and was picked up by a rescue craft.

The crewmember, Bob Sharp, told the Colonist after the race that during the jam the canoes were trying to untangle themselves and the Yukon crew shifted sides.

"Something happened during the shift and all of a sudden there were five on one side of the canoe and only myself on the other. I was pulling so hard I pulled myself right out of the canoe."

The Black Ball ferry Mv. Coho also added to the tension as it nosed its way into harbor moments ahead of the canoes flying toward the finish line. The crowd gasped with relief when it saw the racers would pass astern of the ferry.

Amid cheers, whistles, and the blast of boat horns echoing across the harbor, the New Brunswick canoe flashed across the finish line closely followed by Manitoba and B.C. Yukon sorely missed its lost paddler and wound up in last place.

Points were gained from the finishing positions of the canoes during sprints staged at each stopping point the paddlers had made since leaving Fort St. James July 25.

Over-all winner of the races was Manitoba with a total of 146 points. Other positions: New Brunswick, 144; Quebec, 140; British Columbia, 131; Ontario, 126; Northwest Territories, 111; Saskatchewan, 95; Yukon, 89; Alberta, 69; Nova Scotia 39½; Prince Edward Island, 38; Newfoundland, 37½.

The Manitoba crew captained by 35-year-old Don Starkell of Winnipeg comprised Marcel Mercredie, 18, Laddie Ballantyne 27, both of Moose Lake; Gerry Hart, 23, John Rutley, 21, Jim Killick, 20, Ed Eriendson, 20, all of Flin Flon.

Starkell, Winnipeg's Central YMCA sales manager, also captained the Manitoba canoe teams during the Montreal-New York race in 1966, and the following year in the centennial canoe race from Rocky Mountain House, Alta., to Expo '67 at Montreal.

Before the sprint, Victoria's acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage was presented with a mounted beaver pelt by the Voyageurs as a symbol of the fur trade of yesteryear. Pelts were also given to officials representing the province.

Savage also received a doc-

Syria Cuts All Ties To Jordan

The government, in making the announcement, added that Syrian skies were closed to all Jordanian airliners.

The announcement followed a border artillery and tank duel between Jordanian and Syrian forces in which, according to a Syrian spokesman, four Jordanian Centurion tanks were destroyed.

Syria closed its border with Jordan July 25 in protest against the attitude of the Jordanian government toward Palestinian guerrillas, but left its air space open to Jordanian airlines.

Jordanian flights to the West now will have to be rerouted south to Saudi Arabia and through Egypt.

The action came after Syrian charges that a Jordanian patrol penetrated into Syrian territory Wednesday

Gorton Fall from Power Spectacular and Sudden

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) When former fighter pilot John Gorton became prime minister 3½ years ago, Australians were warned: "Fasten your seat belts."

Even if he had followed this advice himself, it would not have prevented his spectacular fall from power to backbencher in five months.

Last March Gorton, 59, cast the deciding vote against himself on a confidence motion in a caucus of his parliamentary party.

Both occasions involved the press.

Rumpus No. 1 was over alleged leaks to newspapers by Gorton indicating lack of confidence in then defence minister Malcolm Fraser. This came to a head when Fraser, after being sacked by Gorton, told Parliament that Gorton was unfit to hold office.

Rumpus No. 2 was the publication last Sunday of the first episode of Gorton's memoirs, titleu I Did It My Way, in the Sunday Australian newspaper.

Gorton said Thursday after being dismissed that he was "merely replying to the misleading statements and the slanderous scribblings of some journalists."

He was referring to the recently-published book, The Gorton Experiment, by journalist Alan Reid which criticizes Gorton's style of government as a freewheeling one-man rule.

McMahon felt the reply went beyond being a rebuttal and said Gorton had breached the basic principle of cabinet solidarity.

Gorton's article said this solidarity barely existed. He said he could not trust his cabinet colleagues — or their wives — not to disclose confidential matters

Gorton also claims that Australian press barons Sir Frank Packer — for whose Daily Telegraph Reid works — and Maxwell Newton had mounted a campaign against him.

Packer, a close friend of McMahon's and best known outside Australia for his efforts to wrest yachting's Americas Cup from the United States, said Wednesday that even if 50 per cent of what Reid wrote was accurate, then Gorton should go.

In five days since the first Gorton article, the Liberal party has split with Hughes, former navy minister James Killen and former foreign minister Leslie Bury — out by McMahon Aug. 1.

Though it would require only four Liberal party members to cross the floor to bring the government down, the majority of capital commentators believe the thought of the Labor party gaining power is enough to halt rebels.

Butterflies —Millions

MOUNT SHASTA, Calif. (AP) — Butterflies by the millions are fluttering around this Northern California mountain clogging car radiators and sickening highways.

Vacationers report the butterflies settle across the highway in clouds. Truck drivers say they can go only 25 miles an hour through the insects.

The butterflies which began appearing about five weeks ago are identified as monarchs, regal fritillaries, queens, buckeyes, red admirals, American coppers and common wood nymphs. They hatch in the forests on 10,437-foot Mount Shasta.

A ranger said they've been spotted as high as the 5,000-foot level of the mountain.

"There's usually an abundance of them every three years. They run in a cycle. But this is an unusual amount this year. I've never seen this many before," he said.

Backup Colony

Rare Condor Causes Stir

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—The sighting of a rare California condor in a remote mountain region of Baja California was reported Thursday, raising the hope of scientists that a backup colony exists for the nearly extinct bird.

Until the discovery in the Sierra San Pedro Martir, the entire population of the largest living bird of prey was thought to be less than 60.

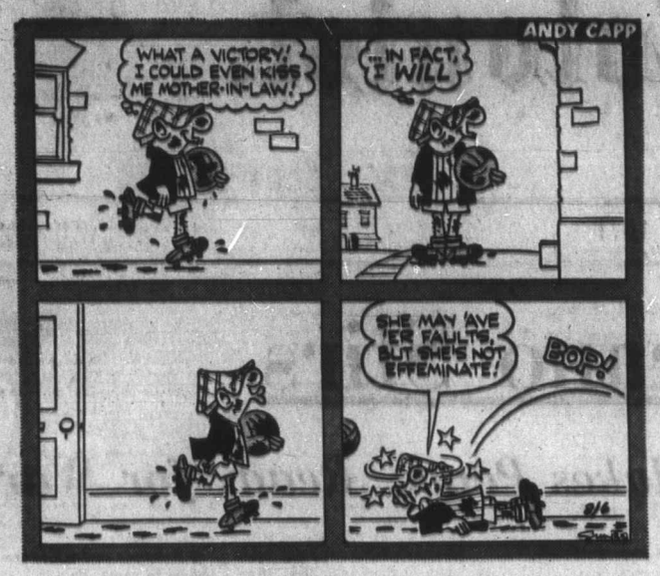

For more than 70 years its last known nesting place was considered to be Los Padres National Forest north of Santa Barbara, Calif.

The sighting occurred on an expedition of the Western Foundation of Vertebrate Zoology, whose members brought back feathers collected at the site. The feathers later were positively identified as those of the California condor.

E. N. Harrison, president of the foundation, announced the discovery.

"We have always been concerned that the California colony might be wiped out in a single catastrophe," Harrison said.

"If there is another colony in Lower California that danger is much reduced."

Belfast's Volcano

they fix their gaze on the street and each person who passes.

Reports have circulated that arms are being smuggled into the city from the republic.

Michael McDonald, 58, one of the voluntary drivers taxiing refugees to the South, said he has not seen evidence of any substantial arms smuggling.

"I wish there were a lot of guns from the South but I don't think we're getting them."

He said the only solution to the present struggle is to throw out the government of Northern Ireland and find new leadership.

Patrick Massey of Reuters news agency reported that the Irish Republican Army says it is training a special teenage "suicide squad" to fight British forces.

The illegal organization is currently striving to recover from the blow that fell when many of its members were hauled in for internment without trial under special measures introduced Monday.

The sources say fanatical republican youngsters are being recruited and trained to charge into action with no regard for their lives.

British army officers say the nature of IRA attacks seems to have altered in recent days.

"The style of fighting we are seeing now is of a desperate character, quite different from the cold-blooded operations of the recent past," one British army officer said.

IRA losses have heavily outnumbered those of the army this week. Most of the gunmen killed were under 20. Outsiders visiting the Catholic ghettoes of Belfast are amazed to see the number of revolvers in possession of boys aged 14 or 15.

These youths mount vigilante patrols at night, checking on passing cars or strangers on foot. They disappear when the army shows up in force.

The clandestine Free Belfast Radio, in its last message before being discovered by British troops, appealed to all Catholics to join either of the IRA wings and unite against the British army.

march of the Apprentice Boys on this same date in 1969.

The Apprentice Boys of today are mainly middle-aged men who belong to a club whose name has been handed down through the generations. Generaly, they parade quietly but the occasion in the past has been seized on as the focus of Catholic-Protestant fighting, the core of Ulster's current savagery.

Meanwhile, refugees in thousands flooked over the border into the Irish republic partitioned from the six counties of Ulster 50 years ago.

Government leaders in London, Dublin and Belfast held emergency meetings on the situation but a political solution appeared as far off as it did two years ago.

The army said it had arrested some 70 per cent of terrorists it blames for the violence. The commander, Lt.-Gen. Sir Harry Tuzo, predicted the internment policy would work in the long run.

In London British Prime Minister Heath called in senior cabinet ministers including Defence Secretary Lord Carrington, to review the sagging morale of British troops and other questions.

In Belfast, Rev. Ian Paisley, leader of Protestant militants, sought unsuccessfully a meeting with Premier Brian Faulkner, to demand tougher security precautions because Protestants were "being forced to leave their homes." His supporters jeered "traitor" and "resign" outside Faulkner's office.

The action was said to be on the road between Der'a, Syria, and Ramtha, Jordan. Der'a and Ramtha are three miles apart, with the Syrian-Jordan border line passing between them.

Jordanian forces are known to be stationed around Ramtha since the bloody crackdown which drove the last of Palestinian guerrillas across the border into Syria, and even forced some to surrender to Israel.

Syria allowed the remnants to regroup in bases near the border, from where Jordan accused them of waging hit-run campaigns.

Syria is the second Arab country to sever diplomatic relations with Jordan. The other is Libya which has also stopped its annual financial subsidy amounting to about $25.2 million.

"This is fine as long as they don't ask me to run one of those things," Savage whispered to his wife as other presentations were made.

The canoes in which the Voyageurs travelled 623 miles are of glass fibre colorfully marked to look like the birch bark craft of old. They weigh about 300 pounds.

After the race the teams shouldered their canoes and marched to the legislative building lawns where the craft were placed beside tents named for each of the pageant entries.

"Its a long time since canoes have been beached on the south side of the Inner Harbor," one elderly Victorian told his wife as they inspected the equipment.

from the reserve to the edge of Lillooet. Before it was halted, a full-scale evacuation of the village had begun. Most of the residents returned to the village at dawn

About 1,500 live in the village proper and another 3,500 in the outlying areas.

A member of the Indian affairs department was working with Chief Scotchman to find temporary accommodation. Several of the homeless were taken to Fountain Village, 10 miles north of here, where a second Lillooet band lives.

Thirty patients in Lillooet hospital on the northern edge of town were evacuated over the Fraser about 9 p.m. Wednesday when flames set the hospital's front lawn afire.

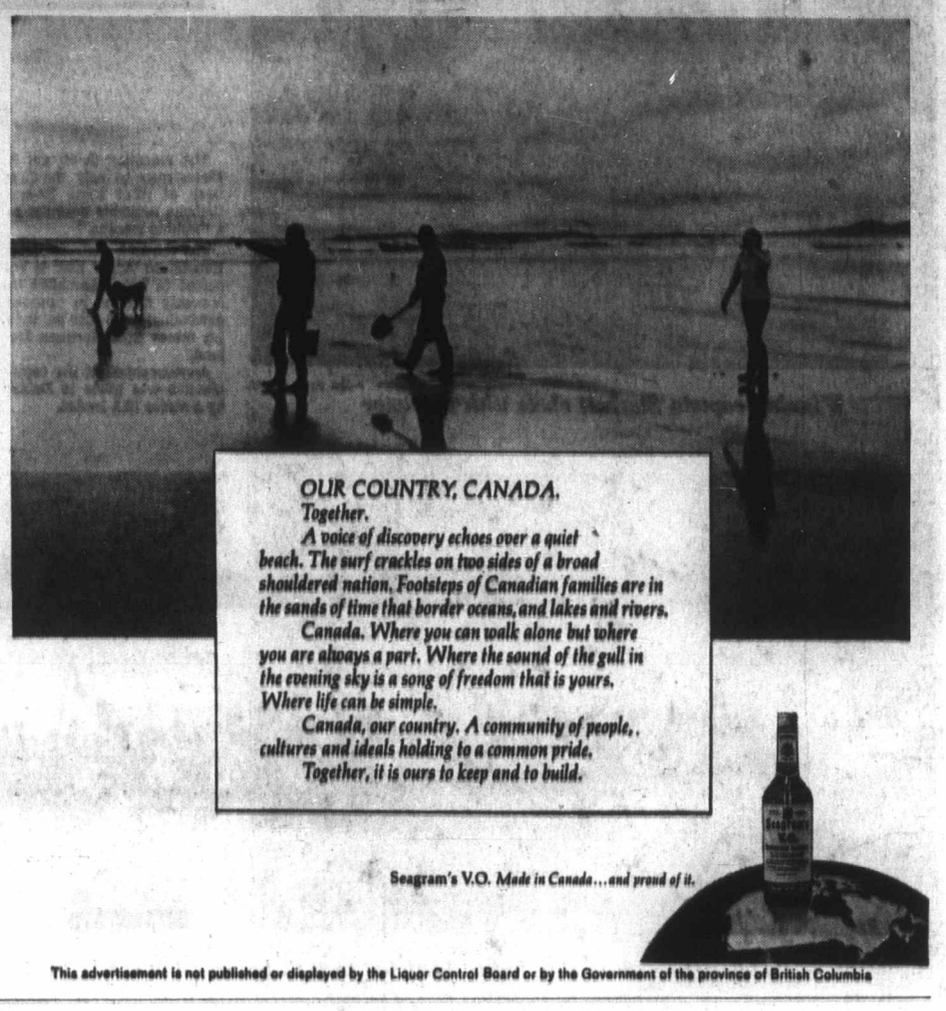

They returned Thursday after a bulldozer cut a wide fireguard between the hospital and the fire.

The fire began in a cabin at a private beach three miles from here on Seton Lake. Forest ranger John Wanderer said the fire which took about four hours to travel three miles from the resort, was fanned by winds up to 45 miles an hour.

"We were just lucky, that's all," Ma Murray, editor of the weekly Bridge River Lillooet News, said Thursday. "When it started, there was a real nasty wind whipped up."

Meanwhile, continuing hot weather, particularly in the interior, kept the B.C. forest fire situation at an extremely critical level.

Overnight winds caused serious problems at many of the blazes in the province's southern and central interior. The provincial forest service announced Thursday the cancellation of campfire permits throughout the Kamloops forest district and the Prince George forest district west of the Rockies. Similar restrictions on open fires already were in effect in the Vancouver and Nelson forest districts.

Your Good Health

Blood Count Varies

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please discuss the significance of a low white blood count.—Mrs. V.I.

I'm sure you'd like a simple, direct answer, and I'd like to give you one, but there are too many possible answers.

A somewhat lower-than-average white cell count may be quite normal for some individuals — a count of 3,500 to 5,000.

Again, there are various causes that can depress the white count. And besides that, keep in mind that there are two main types of white cells, and it becomes a matter of knowing which is depressed.

Depression of the white count can occur with many illnesses, among them typhoid, malaria, brucellosis, and virus diseases including influenza, hepatitis, rubella (German measles).

Drugs of various types can depress the white count if a person happens to be sensitive to them.

A breakdown in the blood-forming mechanism of the body (as in aplastic anemia) can cause a low white count. Excessive exposure to X-ray or to solvents such as benzol and some other chemicals can be a factor.

So really all I can tell you that will be useful to you is that a somewhat low white count may be of no importance — but if the low count is truly significant, there are so many possibilities that your doctor will have to check for symptoms other than merely the white count.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: May I please make a suggestion? I worked in a nursing home and one patient was paralyzed from head to toe, except for one arm — which he had the partial use of.

He had a picture frame about nine by 10 inches, with the letters of the alphabet boldly written about one inch high. If we placed a pencil in his hand and held up the picture frame, he could point to the letters and spell out sentences.

He was very witty and intelligent. He never complained, but told stories and clean jokes and kept me in stitches. The picture frame was a blessing to us. Maybe it can help others.—Mrs. D.P.

Thank you. Such simple ideas sometimes can make a world of difference.

European. Tough.

Rough-and-tumble back roads. That torture-test a car's suspension.

But the real test that separates the tough from the meek is high speed highway driving. Here a car has to contend with strong crosswinds. And power is needed in reserve for passing.

Long, freezing winters. Boiling summer heat. To meet all these conditions a little import has to be tough.

Tough European Engine.
A 2 litre Overhead Camshaft Engine is standard. It has been skilfully designed to give you plenty of power in reserve without increasing gas consumption. You get 100 horsepower. And for those who wish less power a 1600 c.c. OHV engine is optional.

To prove its toughness the engine runs a longer time between service intervals than most imports.

Tough Engineering.
Power front disc brakes are standard. And the rear drum brakes are of a new design where there are no sliding cylinders or shoe anchors to go wrong. For long-life protection the whole system is sealed against dirt and water.

A completely new Short and Long Arm front suspension with 4 bar links at the rear reduces axle hop on acceleration and nose dive on braking.

The front suspension is mounted on a sub-frame to cut down on noise and vibration.

ALL-NEW CORTINA $2348.*

Tough little body.
Cortina's body is strong because the body shell is welded to the body platform to form a unitized construction.

The 56 in. wide track gives it stability and a smooth ride. The 101.5 in. wheelbase provides more room inside but not more space on the road.

To sum up:
All-New Cortina was made beautifully for Canada.

It's styled crisp, clean and sporty.

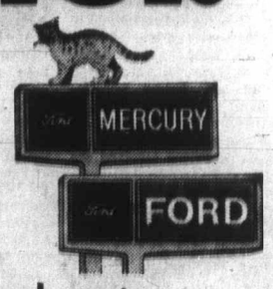

The rugged electrical system, a tough heating system and even an electric rear window defroster tackle all-weather driving conditions.

Plus you have a choice of Cortina L 2 & 4-door, Cortina GT or Cortina 4-door Estate Wagon. All European. And all tough.

Scientist-Astronaut Picked for Moon

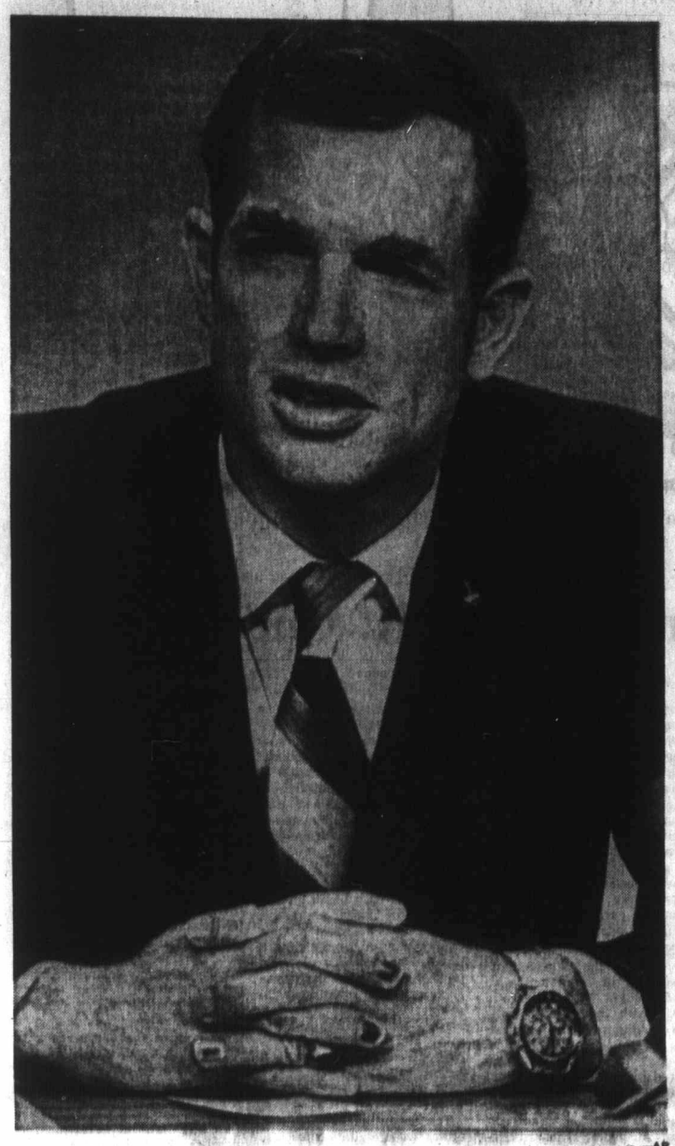

HOUSTON (UPI) — The U.S. space agency late Thursday picked geologist-astronaut Harrison "Jack" Schmitt to be the first scientist to set foot on the Moon as a crewman next year aboard Apollo 17.

Schmitt and veteran spaceman Eugene Cernan will make the U.S.' final manned lunar exploration in the decade-long Apollo program.

Spacemen Watch Unveiling

Big Smile for a Rock

HOUSTON (UPI)—Astronauts David Scott and James Irwin watched anxious scientists unbox their "genesis rock" late Thursday and confirm it indeed might hold the secrets of the moon's creation 4.6 billion years ago.

Scott shows fingernails damaged on moon —AP

"They both stood there and gradually a big smile came over their faces," geologists said, as they realized the rock labelled No. 15415 could be as important as they thought it was when they picked it up during their second moonwalk a week ago Sunday.

Dr. William Phinney, chief geologist at the space centre, said the rock without doubt was an anorthosite, a type relatively rare on Earth and believed by some scientists to have made up the moon's original crust.

Dr. Paul Gast, chief of lunar sciences at the space centre, cautioned it would take days and perhaps months of analysis to determine precisely how old the sample is and if it does come from the moon's original crust.

Regardless, it was a major discovery in America's lunar exploration program and promised to tell man a great deal more about the evolution of the moon.

The half-pound rock was opened after Scott, Irwin and Endeavour pilot Alfred Worden made their first public report on their epic 12-day, $445 million journey to make the fourth manned exploration of the lunar surface.

The astronauts reported they left a memorial on the dusty surface in honor of 14 fellow spacemen — Russian and American — who died helping make their trip possible.

They also reported they found a "gold mine" of information that would warrant expanding the lunar exploration program.

Phinney described the "genesis rock" — so named because the astronauts thought it might date back to the beginning of the moon — as an anorthosite made up almost entirely of plagioclase, a common Earth mineral composed of aluminum and silicon.

Dr. John Wood of the Smithsonian astrophysical observatory in Cambridge, Mass., has put forth the theory that the moon, in its earliest days — believed 4.6 billion or 4.7 billion years ago — was covered by a vast layer of molten rock. The anorthosite then crystallized within this liquid and floated to the top, forming the primitive lunar crust.

Faulkner Rejects Plan To Abolish Government

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—Premier Brian Faulkner early Friday rejected a suggestion by Irish Republic Prime Minister Jack Lynch that the Northern Ireland government be abolished and replaced by a commission representative of "both communities."

Faulkner said in a statement " . . . I find neither its tone nor its content at all helpful in a situation where the prime need is to protect democratic methods against the rule of the gun."

Fraud, Extortion

Charges Face Ex-Mayors

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury in Newark, N.J., indicted two former New Jersey mayors Thursday for extortion and fraud in connection with the construction of a multi-million-dollar postal facility at Kearny, N.J.

Two others also were named in the indictment and a fifth person was named as an unindicted co-conspirator.

The indictment named John V. Kenny, former mayor of Jersey City, Angelo Sarubbi, a former mayor of North Bergen, contractor John Luciani and subcontractor Edward Hansen. Bernard Kenny, an architect and no relation to the former mayor, was named the co-conspirator.

The eight-count indictment charges that John V. Kenny, Sarubbi and Luciani extorted at least $65,000 and a $20,050,000 contract from the firm which held a contract for construction of the facility.

On Wednesday, the federal grand jury in Newark indicted separately Robert Burkhardt, a former New Jersey Democratic state chairman, and state Senator Willard Knowlton, a Bergen County Republican.

A 34-count indictment charged Knowlton with extorting $181,000 from a New York City firm for helping it obtain construction contracts. Burkhardt was charged in a six-count indictment with shaking down the same firm for $30,000 while he was secretary of state in 1964 in return for helping it obtain contracts.

Returning Refugees Choose Bullets and Gas Over Camp

DUBLIN (Reuter) — More than 1,000 refugees from riot-torn Belfast returned to Northern Ireland Thursday, saying they preferred bullets and tear gas to the conditions in an Irish Republic refugee camp Some of the refugees who travelled back to the North on two special trains had arrived at the Gormanston camp, 20 miles north of Dublin, only hours before.

They described conditions in the camp as primitive and complained about the food provided by the Irish army

The camp had been used as a transit centre and was swamped by a huge influx of refugees late Wednesday night and early Thursday.

An Irish government official said Thursday there now are about 4,500 refugees in the republic, excluding those who returned North. In Belfast, the exodus of frightened citizens was said to be continuing.

An army sergeant who tried to stop them told reporters:

"They are so used to it I suppose they have to keep in practice. One lot of soldiers seems like any other to them"

In County Tipperary, Ireland's police training centre has been turned into a refugee camp About 200 trainee policemen have been moved to police stations throughout the republic.

Sadat Predicts 'Fierce Battle'

CAIRO (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat said Thursday night that Egypt is determined to go to war against Israel, and indicated that the fighting will not be confined to trading fire across the Suez Canal. "The battle will be extremely fierce, extremely cruel and extremely bitter . . . but there is no other alternative," Sadat said.

Vancouver Backs Welfare Raises

VANCOUVER (CP) — A welfare department proposal for substantial increases in welfare payments was endorsed Thursday by city council's committee on health and welfare.

The proposal by Walter Boyd, Vancouver's director of welfare services, is essentially that the city's system of welfare payments be brought into line with the cost of living and that it recognize individual and family differences among recipients.

"The present rates are unreasonable and inadequate to meet basic necessities," Boyd told the committee. He said he would have a detailed proposal within two months.

He said he had already discussed the matter with rehabilitation minister Phil Gaglardi and said the minister was "receptive" to the pro- was "receptive" to the proposal.

Boyd, however, said he has not had any indication whether or not Gaglardi would approve his proposals.

Boyd has said the proposals would mean increased welfare costs to the city but said he did not yet know just how the costs will be affected.

La Presse Denies Charge

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for La Presse denied accusations Thursday that the Globe and Mail of Toronto had "loaned" staff to North America's largest French-language newspaper.

Guy Bellavance, spokesman for 350 stereotypers, typographers, pressmen and photoengravers locked out in a contract dispute, had charged La Presse with importing 15 persons from the Toronto newspaper.

Robert Brisebois, a vice-president at La Presse, said there was no truth at all in the union charges.

In Toronto, however, James L. Cooper, publisher of the Globe and Mail, said six of his employees, mainly supervisory personnel, "helped" out at La Presse

"They are no longer there," he said.

Crucial Negotiations

THE TRAGIC EVENTS in Northern Ireland have cast so grimly dark a shadow as almost to obliterate news of important developments elsewhere which would normally reach the public. There is the Middle East dilemma, for instance, still stubbornly eluding solution, but apparently more receptive to suggestions which would at least ensure the continuation of the cease-fire.

Secretary-General U Thant of the United Nations seems to think so, and has appealed to both sides to continue to withhold their fire "in this very difficult and crucial stage of discussions."

The negotiations to which he refers are those envisaging a partial Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory which would allow Egypt to reopen the Suez canal. A continuing cease-fire is naturally essential to realization of these aims.

According to normally reliable Israeli sources, the two-stage withdrawal proposition was actually initiated during talks between the government of Israel and United States Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco last week. It does not matter very much who originated the idea; what does matter is the willingness of Israel to consider it.

There is, of course, an important stipulation. The Egyptian government would have to agree that none of its forces would cross the Suez canal. But on such a basis an interim agreement might very well lead to wider areas of understanding, including, it must be hoped, disposition of the refugee problem. Two further facts seem to support the idea that both sides are anxious to find a formula. Israel's Foreign Minister Abba Eban has said the outlook for maintaining the cease-fire is favorable, provided the military balance was not altered and political activity was maintained.

Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad, for his part, has begun a series of discussions with Egyptian envoys summoned home from Washington, Moscow and the United Nations.

A week ago Mr. Eban said in a televised interview that there had been a major shift in world thinking. Instead of expecting a quick transition from a state of near war to outright peace, the idea of a phased settlement providing for the reopening of the Suez Canal was now acceptable.

That seems to be the immediate aim of the negotiators, with the probability of international guarantees for the inviolability of the ultimate frontier an important part of the settlement.

End to Slide Rule Shopping?

PERHAPS IT'S WOMEN'S LIB but more than likely it is the confusing and complicated labelling of some merchandise that is behind what appears to be a growing number of men in the food market place. The mathematical mind of the male (generally speaking, of course) can figure out faster and more efficiently which is the best buy. Sometimes the "economy" size doesn't give the saving the "regular" or the "giant" or the "family" package produces. The prices have to be compared between brands after a boiling down of costs per pound or ounces or whatever the measure might be.

This can be more than a chore, too, when the quantity is not of an even measure. Some items, for instance, are labelled to contain so many pounds plus so many ounces. At times a slide rule is needed to make comparisons of prices. In fact, some years ago a consumer group produced a slide rule of sorts in the form of a small cardboard window wheel that fitted milady's purse. But even it was more than some could cope with, and besides, why should the shopper have to consult with a gadget to be certain of the right price?

It is all part of the merchandising business in the highly competitive world of today. Gimmickry sometimes is added in the form of "gifts" which can complicate things further for the consumer who, undoubtedly, in many cases is paying for the extras offered.

The situation has existed for a long time. Consumer groups have been discussing it since the 1950s. It was the subject of a Senate-Commons committee study several years ago, which recommended introduction of unit pricing in food stores.

In line with this recommendation, the government finally is taking some action. The minister of consumer and corporate affairs, Ronald Basford, recently asked Canada's major supermarket chains for unit pricing in their stores. The government feels it lacks constitutional power to require retailers to use unit pricing. So it is "encouraging" them to do so.

Unit pricing means that the cost of an item must be broken down into cents per measure, making it possible, at a glance, to see which items are cheaper.

Unit pricing is now in effect in some United States and a few Canadian chain stores. Whether there will be widespread response to Mr. Bashford's urgings remains to be seen.

Some stores see the adoption of the system increasing costs of operation which would have to be passed on to consumers. It could throw out their computerized methods of buying and bookkeeping, and require other changes.

There are those, too, which are said to favor unit pricing at the manufacturer's level, along with standardization of packaging throughout the industry.

If requested changes push up costs on the foodstore shelves, the shopper probably would rather continue puzzling out the prices. But Ottawa claims it can be done without hurting the consumer. Perhaps the government will be able to show how this can be brought about.

Crackdown on the U.K. Underground

By PETER DEELEY from London

THE blast of bombs and the rhetoric of four-letter printed words have abruptly awakened Britain to the realization that behind the face of liberal protest today lies a new and more aggressive opponent — the youth "underground."

For a year now, an anarchist organization calling itself "The Angry Brigade" has been setting off bombs at the homes of those it regards as the bastions of the Establishment — policemen, industrialists and Conservative ministers. So far, in spite of immense effort by Scotland Yard, the organization remains intact. At the same time, an underground press has grown up — reflecting in part the bombers' hatred of authority — which has not hesitated to ridicule and castigate those who wield social, economic and political power in the contry.

Last week the protest of the young came to the boil with the jail sentences imposed upon three editors of one of the underground newspapers, OZ, for having published obscene articles. At the end of the trial the traditional placid facade of British justice — as personified at the Central Criminal Court in London, the Old Bailey, by the golden figure of Justice with her sword in one hand and scales in the other — was shattered by a noisy and bitter demonstration as young supporters of OZ besieged the court building. For these dissenters the generation gap has now become an abyss.

Britain's rebellious youth is no new phenomenon when considered in the world context; compared with the American experience, for instance, both the bombers and the underground newspapers are only mildly revolutionary. But they have behind them the full force of the drugs-sex-hippy culture that first gave London the name of the "swinging city" in the second half of the 1960s.

In fact it now seems that the "pendulum of permissiveness" in Britain is beginning to swing the other way. There are those, mainly the liberal Left, who see in this a concerted conspiracy by authoritarian groups to wipe out the moral degeneracy which they believe to be corrupting the nation. This is totally denied by the pressure groups of angry citizens — an anti-pornography committee has been set up by Lord Longford; a clean-up TV group has waged a long and not unsuccessful campaign against the amount of sex on television screens — who say it is only the natural reaction to the amount of blatant obscenity currently available in visual form.

Apart from these private pressure groups, the most tangible sign of a crackdown by authority has been the setting up of an Obscene Publications Squad by Scotland Yard and similar, smaller groups of policemen, in provincial centres. These came into being largely to deal with the flood of "dirty books" which are now openly on sale in Britain. But over the past three years they have also been concerned with a number of cases of "literary obscenity."

Andy Warhol's film Flesh was seized by police while it was on show at a private cinema club; Beatle John Lennon's lithographs were the subject of a similar raid while they were on exhibition at a London art gallery. An underground newspaper has been heavily fined for carrying advertisements from homosexuals wanting to meet each other; a student publication was prosecuted for distributing pamphlets about venereal desease and where to go for treatment, and there have been numerous court cases over allegedly obscene pictures, cartoons and articles in other underground papers.

Now the question of persecution of the "alternative" channels of communication and thought has come to a head with the jailing of the three editors of OZ, for printing a special "schoolkids' issue." This issue was prepared by schoolchildren, aged between 14 and 16, and dealt only with sex and forms of sexual perversion. The editors, Australian Richard Neville, James Anderson and Felix Dennis were all found guilty after a five-week trial of sending, publishing and having for gain, obscene articles.

During their week in prison awaiting sentence the three men had their long hair out to prison regulation length — an act which has come in for criticism — and were made to wear prison uniform.

The OZ editors, who called 51 defence witnesses — many of them theatrical and television celebrities and writers — to prove that the "schoolkids' issue" was only an attempt to enlighten the young about sexual taboos, maintained that the trial was a political one to harass publication. This was specifically denied by the judge as a "ludicrous thought."

After the case bomb threats against the judge brought a special police guard to his doorstep. At the same time a high-powered device blew up part of the London flat of the secretary for trade and industry, John Davies. Mr. Davies and his family were away at the time but the explosion injured a woman in a neighboring flat.

* * *

The Angry Brigade said this attack was retaliation for Mr. Davis' part in shutting down the Upper Clyde shipyard group with consequent redundancy for about 20,000 workers. The apparent impunity with which The Angry Brigade has been able to attack the homes of prominent people, often slipping through police guards, led to an intensification of effort by the special Scotland Yard detectives squad given the job of catching the bombers. Mr. Davis and other ministers are now receiving permanent protection.

Though The Angry Brigade has never revealed its political ideology or its ultimate purpose in the communications it has issued after each bomb attack, it is certainly known to be extreme Left in attitude and primarily concerned with worker problems: apart from the Clydeside shipbuilders issue, another attack on the home of the managing director of Ford of Britain, William Batty, was said to be a protest against recent strike issues at Ford motor company plants. And when the Industrial Relations Act — the measure that seeks to clamp down on wildcat strikes—was first introduced, it was the home of the minister responsible for that piece of legislation, Robert Carr, which was attacked.

At a time when Britain is facing an unprecedented number of labor problems — rising unemployment, the issue of Common Market labor — The Angry Brigade will have a lot over which to get annoyed. But it is the attack on cultural liberty — as personified in the OZ trial — which may most radicalize the young. Bombing they may not condone but they see it as no less an evil than the legal attacks on their standards by the establishment.

Is This Progress?

THE Asphalt Jungle citation for 1971 should be awarded to the municipality of Saanich for its magnificent contribution to the materialistic way of life.

The pillars of progress, formerly obscured by the unsightly trees on Shelbourne Street, can now be fully appreciated by all. Proudly flanking this splendid strip of asphalt, stark wooden obelisks now stand, like drunken sentinels, carrying the word and power of man to man.

The "final solution" to the Shelbourne problem may be an achievement, but is it progress?

Today's Youth

I have read with disgust in recent months letters of hostility and criticism levelled against the youth of today. I find myself remembering an incident of three decades ago when I was a youth.

While stationed at Patricia Bay in 1940, I was hitching a ride to Victoria. A Cadillac with only the driver slowed, paused, started off again, then stopped. Accepting a ride I noticed a Negro girl at the wheel. Immediately she explained why she was hesitant to stop. Apparently in giving a lift to an airman from our squadron the previous day, his way of thanking her for the ride was to slam the door, stick his head through the open window of the car and remark: "Had I known you were a Nigger wench I would not have signalled for a ride." This fellow had short hair, was clean shaven and well groomed.

From my daily contacts with travelling youth, I am convinced an occurrence of this nature would not happen today. It is a distinct pleasure and heart-warming experience to meet and talk with these kids. They are appreciative, kind and considerate. I also recognize the fact that travel is a positive, maturing and peace-making experience. Not all the rhetoric of the high minded politicians can achieve as much for the unity of Canada and the world at large as the cross-country wanderings of today's youth. What a tremendous way to meet all sorts of people from various walks of life. At their journey's end I am sure they no longer harbor thoughts of suspicion, fear and hatred, as that airman once did.

I am bored to tears listening to many of my own generation expounding their views on how they survived the depression and inferring that today's youth do not measure up to their standard. I too, saw the depression years. I am fully aware of the devastating affect it had on many. However, today we are not only faced with unemployment and a serious state of the economy but the difficult task of breaking down such complex problems as poverty, war, hatred, fear, violence, pollution and disease. Life today for most young people particularly, is just a set of problems to be solved.

Sometimes I reflect more deeply on life and ask myself what would I do if I were young today? Invariably I end up thinking I would perhaps adopt the philosophy of today's youth. To those with critical remarks and comments: obviously their minds are completely closed, they have not kept in step with times, conditions and attitudes in 30 years. It is painfully evident there are no young people in their homes today.

Fluoridation

In his official capacity as national director of Nutrition Canada, Dr. Z. I. Sabry stated, "There also is the question whether the people have the right to vote on something of a health nature. Personally, I say 'no'."

Obviously, a somewhat dictatorial attitude when he included the question of fluoridating our drinking water supplies. This old controversial subject to be nationally reviewed again!

An acceptable compromise for parents desiring fluoride treatment for their children's teeth: fluoride dentifrice; tablets for dilution, or fluoride teeth-coating by dentists. But for most middle-aged and elderly citizens, the idea of adding sodium fluoride (compulsory medication) to our drinking water supplies must surely be considered ingestibly unacceptable in relation to the cumulatively harmful effects widely recognized.

Appreciated

May I, through the courtesy of your column, take this opportunity to extend my personal thanks to the many citizens of the Greater Victoria area who offered hospitality to visiting sailors during the recent British Columbia Centennial Naval Assembly.

On many occasions during the Naval Assembly I was approached by officers and men of the visiting Australian, American, Japanese, and Colombian ships expressing appreciation for the warm hospitality and friendship extended by local residents. I would like it to be known that each small and individual gesture has been very much appreciated by our guests and has helped to make their stay a most enjoyable and memorable event. They have sailed from our waters with a very fine impression of the people of Victoria and citizens of Canada which can only help the good relations between our respective citizens.

It is my pleasure and privilege to thank so many citizens of the locality for all that they have done.

Goodness

I noticed an article in the Colonist, July 21, 1971, stating — "Nothing Will Do Any Good!", by Dennis Braithwaite, in which he suggests we — "fall back on good old resignation" — "Resign yourself to the ultimate folly of all proposals, solutions and schemes of man," — "We mustn't act on a belief in the perfectibility of man," etc. —

I feel we may often have to face resignation, and can never attain perfection in this life, but on the other hand life has been brightened for so many by the continued and varied photographs of our own Beacon Hill park in your newspaper. The "Secrets of the Ancient Land of It," featuring a guided tour through a child's very own garden of verse, Sunday, July 18, 1971 was delightful.

In Friday's paper, July 23, 1971, Page 19, the articles, "Counselling Team Opens New House," and "Outdoor Learning Makes Day Camp Treat," sponsored by the University of Victoria for the first time this year, all show that change for the good is taking place right here in Victoria.

Everyone has something of value to contribute to the common good.

I have mentioned only a very few examples but do appreciate this hopeful attitude your paper is taking in these difficult times.

Wallace Candidacy

Blow to Nixon Hopes

By WILLIAM S. WHITE
from Washington

GEORGE Wallace's public declaration of a firm resolve to run again for the presidency next year has overnight altered the whole political landscape.

It is, first of all, a surprise, even to the sagest of Southern politicos. They had figured the Alabama governor to be actually out of it on the assumption that he had passed his hat for contributions too often and could not again raise enough money to barnstorm the country.

But it is much more than a surprise. It is a blow directed to the heart of President Nixon's hopes for 1972. For on every present objective indicator the president simply must carry a substantial part of the South — if, that is, the Democrats do not nominate as his adversary some far-out, self-defeating, ultra-liberal isolationist as, say, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota.

* * *

Indeed, the whole master strategy of the Nixon administration has long been built upon an awareness that the president has little chance of doing much at the polls in the urban East and must rely upon a mural made up of the bulk of the Southern electoral votes — notably those of Texas — plus the Middle West and much of the Far West — in this case, most poignantly, his native California.

The president's great need of Texas for next year's election has, of course, long since been signalled in his choice of the former Democratic governor of the state, John Connally, to be at once his secretary of the treasury and his chief spokesman on all economic and fiscal affairs.

His equally urgent requirement to hold California has been spelled out more recently — in the decision to hold the 1972 Republican National Convention in San Diego. The fact of the matter in this connection is that White House informants will concede in deep privacy that if the election were held tomorrow, Mr. Nixon probably would lose the state.

Beyond all this, however, lies the ultimate meaning of the threat now openly posed by Wallace. While he is denouncing the administration for school integration policies he calls too harsh (and the liberal Republicans are simultaneously assailing them as too soft), the core of the Wallace challenge is in the economic field. No man in the country could more adroitly exploit unemployment. For Wallace is only superficially a race-issue politician; at bottom he is an old-fashioned populist, appealing not so much to the color as to the thin pocketbooks of the lower economic classes.

The man who got some 10 million votes from within those classes in the presidential election of 1968 would, on dispassionate analysis, be likely to reach or excel that level in 1972 unless an economic miracle should meantime befall.

So when Wallace says, as he has just done, that "only a meaningful change of direction in the Nixon adminstration or the Democratic party" would cause him not to enter the field next year, the most reasonable conclusion, especially in the present circumstances, is that he really means it. Of course, it could be argued that he is really only holding a stick over the president's head — but the Nixon administration cannot and certainly will not risk putting the matter in this relatively rosy light.

"Meaningful changes" in Wallace's definition — that is to say, an abandonment for practical purposes of school integration and an economic policy of hot, easy money in a time of high inflation — the administration with equal certainty cannot make.

As to the Democrats, whoever they might nominate next year is not going down well with George Wallace — that much is for sure.

"He has to learn everything about modern, complicated weapons, how to clean his rifle, how to fight a more powerful foe and survive."

Many Indians expect that a serious war will break out in East Pakistan toward the end of this year or early in 1972.

"Until now it has been a massacre in East Bengal," one Indian said. "By next year, it will be a civil war."

Much depends on how rapidly Bangla Desh, the name given to the so-called independent republic of East Bengal, can train its guerrilla fighters.

Already, training camps have been set up in West Bengal and other border areas of India. Many of these training areas are right next to the refugee camps where East Pakistanis fleeing from army terror in their own land have found shelter.

Retired Indian officers and soldiers are helping to train the Bangla Desh freedom fighters, and both the central and the state governments are looking the other way.

India does not want a war with Pakistan. Officials from Prime Minister Indira Gandhi down have made this perfectly clear.

But almost every Indian has great sympathy for the 7,000,000 refugees, and for the 70,000,000 who remain in East Pakistan, and who have had to knuckle under due to the brutal policies of genocide practised by the armed forces from West Pakistan.

This means that the many thousands of freedom fighters today being trained on Indian soil will also get Indian supplies. The Indian people, if not the Indian central and state governments, will help them with arms and transport and food and medical supplies.

"There is no way you can prevent the development of a viable guerrilla force over the next year or two," a top-ranking Indian offical told me.

"It will not be like Vietnam in that no outside forces will be involved. The Indian army does not intend to intervene. But there will surely be a constant flow of arms, ammunition and other supplies from India whose people want to see an independent East Bengal."

Ever since the West Pakistani army moved against the people of East Bengal on March 25, there has been slaughter. The millions who fled into India because of the terror launched by troops and Moslem militants felt they had no other choice. Countless thousands never reached India, but were killed or died by the roadside, felled by hunger and disease.

Three Canadian Members of Parliament who toured India and East Pakistan recently said the fighting in East Bengal already has taken 500,000 to 1,000,000 lives.

The tragic trek into India is one of the great human tragedies of the 20th Century, and the hatreds that have been generated cannot be wiped out for generations.

Officers of the West Pakistani army have said quite bluntly that they have killed not only older children but infants because orphans grow up as rebels who seek revenge.

Yet revenge will come surprisingly soon from the Indian side of the frontier.

Right now, trigger-happy Indian and Pakistani troops are exchanging small arms fire sporadically every day along the 1,500-mile frontier. Every so often two-inch mortars or artillery rounds zoom across the border.

Both sides have dug bunkers and erected defensive positions. At many points, troops of the East Pakistan Rifles, attacked by the western army, are now in Indian territory defending the frontier.

But the heavy fighting is not expected until large numbers of armed and trained guerrilas filter back into East Pakistan in the hope of recapturing their homeland.

The thousands of guerrillas now being trained in India already have a government. It was proclaimed as an independent state on April 10, 1971.

The proclamation of independence order pointed out that in free elections held in East Bengal from December 7, 1970 until January 17, 1971, voters elected 167 of 169 Awami league representatives.

But instead of convening an assembly to frame a new constitution for Pakistan, as promised, says the declaration, the hierarchy declared an unjust and treacherous war. The leader of the Awami League, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, was imprisoned and there are doubts that he is still alive. The Sheikh was the first to predict the coming bloodbath.

In a prophetic pre-election speech made on November 28, 1970. Sheikh Mujibur Rahman said:

"Our struggle must go on. For the real goal lies ahead. Power has to be won by the people. The exploitation of man by man and of region by region, must be brought to an end.

"The powerful coteris, which have ruled Pakistan for 22 years, will do everything possible to prevent transfer of power to the people."

The Sheikh predicted that even after the elections, the hierarchy would continue to obstruct every effort to end exploitation.

"They have money," warned Sheikh Mujib. "They have influence. They have the capacity to use force against the people. History, however, testifies that a determined people can successfully resist and overcome such forces of oppression."

The Sheikh promised in the election speech that his Awami League would stand by the side of the people and indeed would lead them in resisting oppression.

"No people have secured freedom and justice unless they have been geared to die for it," he said.

"We therefore serve notice upon the forces of reaction in our society that we will confront them, and if democratic processes are obstructed, we shall resist them by every means possible."

The Sheikh explained that in order to overcome the crisis in East Pakistan, people must be given their political freedom. He said the overwhelming multitudes of East Bengal felt a sense of economic injustice. There was also a deep sense of injustice created by the widening economic disparity between the eastern and western regions.

In Pakistan, about two dozen families have acquired over 60 per cent of the nation's industrial assets, 80 per cent of its banking assets, and 75 per cent of its insurance assets.

Of the total bank advances in Pakistan, 83 per cent are concentrated in only 3 per cent of the total accounts.

Years before the massacres by the army began, East Pakistan and indeed the whole land had economic problems that seemed to defy solution.

Despite nominal land reforms, feudal lords retain princely estates. They enjoy vast privileges and their prosperity increases, while the lot of the poor peasants becomes more desperate.

In a bid for survival, according to East Bengali leaders, millions are crowding into the cities. Official estimates claim that one-fifth of the labor force, or about 9,000,000 people, were unemployed before the disaster in March. This figure has risen since then.

Today, particularly in East Pakistan, the situation is critical. From the air, one sees hundreds of burned-out villages. Even the East Pakistani capital of Dacca, with a normal population of 1,500,000, is half empty. The same is true of other cities in the eastern wing.

Millions have fled to relatives, seeking the questionable safety of the countryside, while millions of others have made the long trek to the Indian border.

Large city areas that once housed the poorest members of the Hindu minority have been razed to the ground by the Punjabi army.

But will the armed forces from West Pakistan be able to maintain their rule of fear indefinitely? Many diplomats doubt it.

The vast majority of the 70,000,000 Bengalis who remain in the eastern wing of the country separated from the West by 1,000 miles of Indian territory want independence. If and when the civil war begins on a serious scale, they will be on the side of the guerrillas.

Military experts estimate that in view of the tense situation between India and Pakistan, the army regime of President Yahya Khan can afford to send at the most 80,000 to 100,000 troops to the eastern wing.

Indian officials say that in time even 100,000 troops could not hold out against a hostile population of 70,000,000, particularly if the freedom fighters make some visible headway in their war against domination by the West.

The fact that most countries have stopped their economic aid to West Pakistan is an indication that foreign diplomats in the country feel that the Yahya Khan regime faces a very bleak future indeed. Even the World Bank has issued a strong report condemning the conduct of the army.

Pakistan has been one of China's closest allies in recent years, and trade, as well as political ties, has grown. The Chinese have been competing with the United States in supplying arms to Pakistan.

But according to the latest Indian intelligence reports, the number of trucks bringing arms and ammunition into Pakistan along the strategic road from the Chinese autonomous region of Sinkiang has been dwindling in recent weeks.

If a genuine people's independence movement develops in East Pakistan in the years ahead, and particularly if pro-Maoist forces team up with Bengali nationalists to achieve freedom from the western wing, Peking could find itself in a difficult situation.

Peking could hardly deny the presence of a real liberation movement in the East, yet would wish to maintain good relations with West Pakistan for political reasons. The governments of China and Pakistan have used their hostility toward India as a common bond for many years.

When the Pakistan army moved against the people in March, villagers and citizens armed with sticks, spears and home-made rifles tried to put up some form of resistance. They were crushed by the far heavier firepower of the army.

It will be a very different story if a civil war of major proportions breaks out in East Pakistan in the months and years ahead.

In March and April, the East Pakistanis and the refugees in India were all asking why the international community is not helping.

But today the world's nations are helping by putting pressure against General Yahya Khan and by pouring vast quantities of aid into India to help the refugees.

These factors will speed the creation of a viable guerrilla force.

A few months ago, there was little hope of any real resistance by freedom fighters. Now that the Indian people have decided to provide food, shelter, training camps and even arms and ammunition to the refugees, the situation has altered.

The isolated bombings and guerrilla raids today being mounted against the army in East Pakistan will grow in time into a drawn-out civil war.

Nobody can foretell how long it might last. But Indian officials, at least, believe that the concept of a unified Pakistan is a thing of the past.

Indeed, Pakistan was never unified except in the political and juridical sense. It was lunacy in the first place for the British to believe when they divided the Indian subcontinent in 1947 that a state separated by 1,000 miles of hostile territory can survive. Every day it is becoming increasingly obvious that within East Pakistan lie the seeds of the next long and dangerous war in Asia.

Chiang Has Problems

Taiwanese Smiling

By DONALD BREMNER from Taipei

Many of Taiwan's 12 million native Taiwanese are smiling to themselves over the prospect that Nationalist China may soon lose its UN seat to Peking.

For them, the coming UN debate and its outcome are a means to focus attention on their grievances against the Chiang Kai-shek regime.

"If Taiwan loses its place in the United Nations and Peking comes in," one prominent Taiwanese said, "this government can no longer say it is the government of all of China and use that to justify excluding Taiwanese from the National government.

"Of course, we Taiwanese aren't talking about it," he added with a knowing grin, putting a finger to his lips and glancing around the room with mock fear.

Whether conditions for Taiwanese actually will change much because of the UN issue remains to be seen. Heavy pressure by security agencies can be expected to prevent any serious attempt to explore it here even if the Taiwanese wanted to.

Supporters abroad of Taiwanese independence might be able to use it to arouse public opinion in their countries, however, particularly in the United States.

Nevertheless, some leading Taiwanese are hopeful that out of the UN battle and the whole change in Nationalist China's status stemming from the Sino-American rapprochement will come a better deal for the Taiwanese who make up 85 per cent of Taiwan's population.

Antipathy between native Taiwanese and Mainland Chinese, which reached a climax in the bloody repression by Nationalist troops in 1947, has lingered since the Mainlanders fled here to escape the communists.

Both groups are ethnically Chinese. Only the small group of Taiwan's aborigines are non-Chinese. But the Taiwanese are descendants of emigrants long ago from South China coastal areas. Among themselves, they speak the dialects of southeast China, while the more recently arrived Mainlanders speak the dialects of their native regions, principally Mandarin, the official language of both Nationalist China and Communist China.

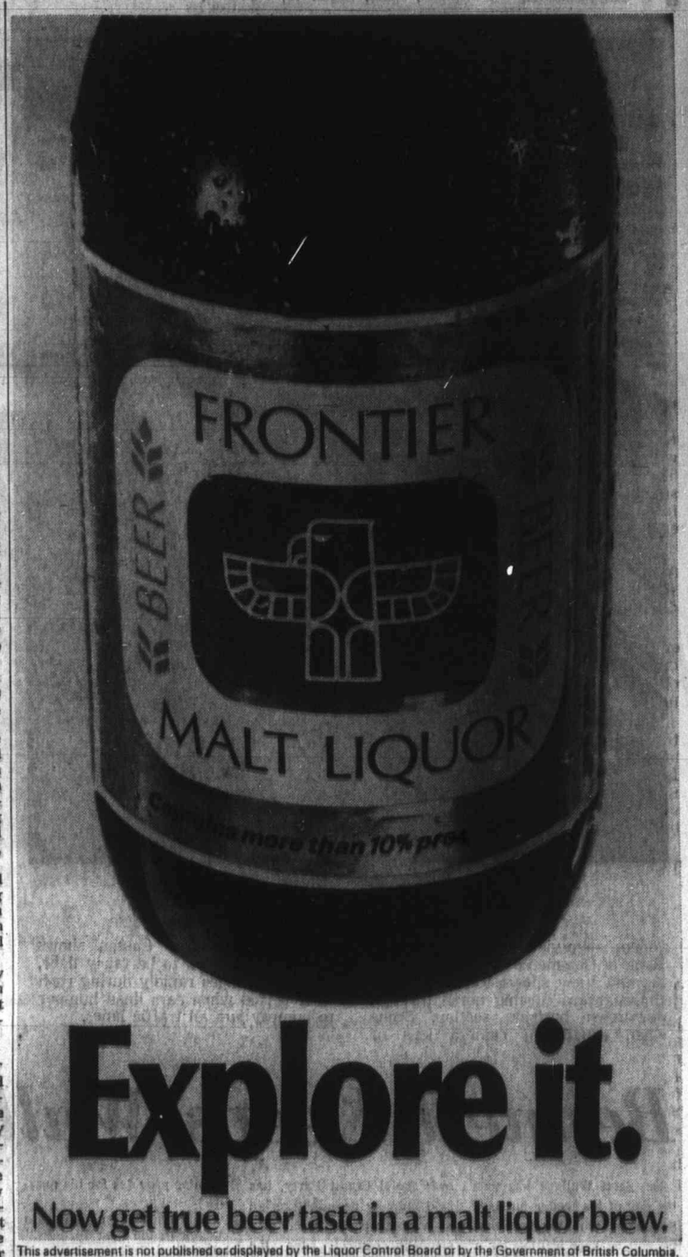

Contacts have helped to overcome the linguistic and cultural differences. Schools are fully integrated and there is some intermarriage.

But a feeling of separateness continues. Mainlanders are largely concentrated in the urban areas and work in the central government, the military or college-level teaching. Taiwanese predominate in rural areas, and work in agriculture, business and local government.

Taiwan's growing economy has benefitted Mainlander and Taiwanese alike, and a rising standard of living has helped to take the steam out of the Taiwan independence movement, which by all accounts is weak, fragmented and ineffective.

Leading Taiwanese, however, still chafe at their minor role in the national government. Chiang brought a government of Mainlanders from China two decades ago, and it has remained largely that to this day.

Taiwanese fill most government posts at the city, country and provincial level. But at the central level, both in party and government, they have very little power.

Perch for Bank Ledgers

Traffic Clogs Ferries

Unusually heavy traffic throughout most of the day created delays of two hours or longer Thursday for motorists at the Swartz Bay ferry terminal.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman said the ferries in service Thursday were "right on time . . it's the traffic that's holding things up" The spokesman said the unusually large number of trailers connected with the returning "Wonderful World of Horses" show held Wednesday in Victoria may have contributed to the backup of waiting vehicles early Thursday morning

Cancer Victims Fear Pain—Not Death—Most

The greatest fear of persons who learn they have untreatable cancer is that they will die in excruciating pain, says a doctor who works with the B.C. Cancer Institute in Vancouver.

Dr. Frank Turnbull of Vancouver, a neurosurgeon, writes in the current edition of The Canadian Nurse that not every cancer is lethal and those that are lethal are not always painful.

"But what the lay person does not know, but doctors do know, is that pain is more prevalent in certain types of cancer than in others. It occurs most frequently with cancer of the cervix, the lung, the rectum and the prostrate."

Dr. Turnbull points out that cancer sufferers go through several stages. They first are optimistic and want to talk about their trouble, but when they learn that there is no cure they start discussing new symptoms.

"The terminal stage is a time of genuine crisis. The patient is starting to die . . . He does not fear death as much as the process of dying. This fear includes a fear of pain, of not being able to cope with it, or of not obtaining sufficient relief from pain."

Turnbull says "terminal care" is a legitimate phrase but it should never mean that nothing more can be done.

"There is often a good deal to be done — not officious meddling to prolong life at any cost, but a positive effort to control symptoms such as pain, nausea and confusion."

Turnbull says the Cancer Institute has found that cancer of the lung, rather than cancer of the cervix, is the source of more patients with serious problems of pain. This contrasts with the situation of 20 years ago, when most of the painful cancers were those of the cervix.

Lung cancer's pain often arises from the disease spreading to the chest wall and spinal column.

In cases of severe and intractable pain, the distress is usually eased by surgery, in which the diseased part is removed or a nerve is cut, or with strong pain-killing drugs such as morphine.

Bennett Keeps Wallace Waiting

Dr. Scott Wallace has won the ear of his leader but he's not happy with the fact that he will be kept waiting for a while.

Premier Bennett said Thursday he would "gladly" meet with his troubled MLA from Oak Bay but that such a meeting will have to wait until he returns in about 10 days from a Great Pacific Eastern railway tour of the Cariboo.

Wallace, often critical of his own Social Credit Party, has said publicly he might resign as a result of increased government control over the medical profession.

His main target has been a recent cabinet order-in-council that gives Health Minister Ralph Loffmark the power to say whether or not a doctor has privileges at any specific hospital. Wallace is just one of many who have attacked the order as dictatorial.

He said Thursday he had wanted to get his meeting with Bennett over with because his decision on whether to leave the party will be based on what answers the premier provides for his questions.

"The issues aren't going to change in the next 10 days," he said.

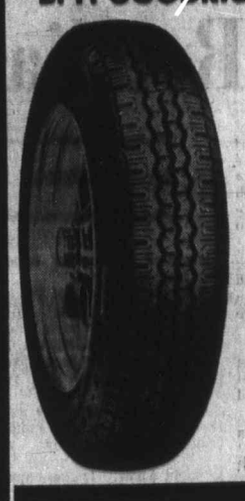

"It is a fact of life he (Bennett) received my request a week ago Monday to set up a meeting when I returned Aug. 9. I've certainly been available Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

"I'm not putting an interpretation on that," Wallace said. "But these are the facts of life."

During an interview earlier in the day, Bennett referred to Wallace as a "responsible man," a "fine chap," and a "good MLA."

Speaking in a light vein, he said Wallace sometimes spoke for the party, but more often against it.

He said Wallace, as a member of the party, was fully entitled to his independent views. But he didn't think the MLA could "be more independent" if he actually sat as an independent member and not as a Socred.

Berlin Access

Russians Won't Promise

BERLIN (UPI) — Western allied diplomats tried unsuccessfully Thursday to win a Russian guarantee of free access to West Berlin in return for a limited Soviet presence in the city.

With no agreement in sight despite a marathon three-day session, the American, British and French ambassadors to West Germany and the Soviet ambassador to East Germany recessed the meeting until Monday.

The westerners were reluctant to meet the Russians today. It is the 10th anniversary of the construction of the wall the communists built to seal off the half of Berlin they control from West Berlin.

Russian Ambassador Pyotr Abrassimov acceded to the proposed recess without discussion, western diplomatic sources said.

In East Berlin, Communist authorities prepared to commemorate the 10th anniversary with victory celebrations. Among other things, children were encouraged to play "the wall game" in which they build barriers against capitalist intruders.

Since the Berlin Wall was erected 10 years ago, 65 East Germans have been killed and 91 wounded trying to escape to the West across it, West Berlin police records showed.

In almost all cases they were shot by Communist guards manning the 244 observation towers, 144 bunker strongpoints and miles of control catwalk lining the 27 miles of the "wall of shame."

But police said the toll might well be much higher. Many would-be refugees have probably been shot in incidents not observed by West Berlin police, or drowned trying to swim across canals and other water barriers.

The East German Communists, backed by the Russians who have 22 divisions in East Germany, started building the wall Aug. 13, 1961, to stop the flight to the West of valuable citizens.

Death Has 90 Storeys

CHICAGO — A woman plunged 1,000 feet to her death from the 90th-floor apartment of a business executive in the John Hancock Centre, Chicago's tallest skyscraper and one of the world's tallest buildings.

Police said they were investigating the death of Mrs. Lorranie Kowalski, 29-year-old widow, as an apparent suicide. Homicide Sgt. James McFarland said she "jumped through the window" of the 100-storey building. Police said Mrs. Kowalski, a secretary, was nude.

She plunged from the apartment of Marshall Berlin, 45-year-old vice-president and son of the founder of the L.S. Berlin Press, one of the world's largest lithographic companies.

McFarland said Berlin told investigators Mrs. Kowalski visited him shortly after 3 a.m. and was angry about something. Berlin said he went into another room, leaving her alone in the sitting room, and heard glass break.

He returned to the room, found the thermal pane broken and Mrs. Kowalski gone, he said.

U.S. Study:

34 Million Killed In China

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Senator James Eastland (D — Miss.) urging caution in dealings with Mainland China, released a study Thursday which estimated the Chinese Communists had killed at least 34 million persons in military actions and purges in the past 44 years.

Eastland made public a study commissioned by his internal security subcommittee which said that beginning with the "first civil war" of 1927-28, the Communists had killed at least 34.3 million persons, and possibly as many as 63.7 million, in military operations, political purges and terroristic slaughter.

The study was carried out by Dr. Richard Walker, director of the institute of international studies at the University of South Carolina, whom Eastland described as a foremost China scholar.

Walker said slaughter is continuing in China and that "it is worth remembering that at the very moment in June, 1971, (as the report was being written) . . . trops of the People's Liberation Army were machine-gunning scores of their fellow Chinese who were attempting to escape to Hong Kong from Mao's new paradise."

Victoria's Inner Harbor was journey's end Thursday for quartet of adventurers who paddled length of Fraser River after leaving Moose Lake, at foot of Mount Robson on B.C.-Alberta border July 17. Four — David Stewart, 27, White Rock; Orville Brockwell, 21, New Westminster; Phil Forth, 23, Vancouver, Vern Reimer, 24, of Yarrow — retraced footsteps of explorers Alexander Mackenzie, Simon Fraser and Overlanders and were greeted on arrival by Lawrie Wallace, general chairman of B.C. centennial — (Jim Ryan)

Council in Flashback

Only the Names Change

By HUBERT BEYER

The issues never change.

It's people who change. They have different attitudes towards the same old issues. If they didn't, this is what could conceivably have happened at a fictitious meeting of Victoria city council some 100 years ago.

"Gentlemen, I call this meeting to order, Ald. Crispie, would you please refrain from having your tea and crumpets in this chamber," Mayor Curtly Salmon shouted, banging his gavel furiously on the desk.

"Item No. 1 on the agenda is the proposed James Bay landfill . . . take your top hat off, Ald. Alcofson," he said.

"As you know, this mud reclamation program is supposed to give us the opportunity of building one of the finest hotels in the country, right by the waterfront," Salmon explained.

"Now just a minute there," Ald. Peter Pollution interrupted the mayor.

"I think it's preposterous to even think of ruining the environment by filling in one of the most picturesque bays in Victoria," he said.

"This is but another example of the mayor's $1.49-day myopia," he added, but the mayor cut him off:

"You're a fine one to talk about ruining the environment. What about your livery stable? Your horses leave pollution all over the city," Salmon said trying to control his anger.

"And furthermore," he went on, "I wish to draw to your attention that there won't be any $1.49-day for at least another 80 years."

But Pollution seemed undeterred.

"Now how about this hotel? If we allow such a structure to be built at that location, we'll ruin the waterfront for at least the next 100 years. There's a place for hotels, but not at the Inner Harbor," he said.

At this point, Crispie finished his last sip of tea, wiped a few crumpet crumbs off his beard and said:

"What's the matter with you guys anyway? Next you probably want some great big Parliament Building complex to be built where it blocks the view of the Olympics."

"Order, gentlemen, order," he shouted.

"This isn't a circus; it's supposed to be a council meeting."

Ald. Robert Beard, who had silently listened to the argument, rose and told council:

"I think it would be nice to fill in James Bay, build a beautiful hotel on the land we have reclaimed, but I can't help but think what will happen in the future."

Such a spot of beauty, Beard said, would inevitably attract not only tourists, but also young loafers who had nothing better to do than sit there by the waterfront and enjoy the amenities created by the city.

"I would go along with this project if we could make sure that only the working people and the tourists will enjoy it. We could, for instance, take turns as aldermen to stand guard at the waterfront with whips, and drive all the . . ."

"Hippies," one of his colleagues suggested, but then he remembered that his choice of word was somewhat premature.

"That's enough discussion. What's your pleasure? Mayor Salmon asked.

It was Ald. Percy Frump who suggested council table the matter.

"That way we won't have to make up our minds too soon and we won't run the risk of being criticized for making the wrong decision," he said.

Bethune Park Proposed

A small park to be established at the Oak Bay junction should be named after Dr. Norman Bethune, the Canadian doctor who became a national hero in China, Victoria Ald. Peter Pollen said Thursday.

"For all his political limitations, Dr. Bethune was an outstanding man," Pollen told Victoria city council.

"Unfortunately, he was a member of the communist party and a hero in Communist China, but that doesn't mean we can't recognize him as a great man," he said.

Bethune was born in Gravenhurst, Ont. and went to China in 1938, later dying there.

Council authorized the spending of $13,750 to convert into a small park the property at the corner of Fort and Pandora, formerly occupied by a service station.

First Munch Loud, Clear

By GEORGE GIBSON
Business Editor

The news of today was available last week if rapeseed futures speculation is your particular form of financial torture.

You just haven't been paying attention the last three days if you haven't noticed that Prairie farmers are concerned — and justly so — with an infestation of army worms in rapeseed crop. One would expect the price to rise because of an expected shortage. And it did.

But for you, despite the best efforts of our news services, the word is late. Indications are that investors who deal in rapeseed futures had their ears to the ground and heard the first munch of a rape plant stalk more than a week ago.

September rapeseed closed in Vancouver Aug. 3 at $3.12¾. In two days it went off to $2.95. Aug. 6 up 10 cents to $3.05 and Wednesday, five days later, the price was $3.17⅝ at the close.

It should have gone even higher Thursday as those holding could envisage empty storage bins all winter with the crop imperilled. So what happened? The price nosedived to $3.09¼ at the close.

It was just another classic case of the vagaries of grain speculation. The U.S. agriculture department issued a high forecast for the soybean crop and the oil from soybeans and rapeseed are competitive commodities with each other.

Incidentally, a year ago the stuff was worth $2.50 a bushel or thereabouts.

Horsepower

Gross and net horsepower ratings of General Motors cars have been tossed back and forth the last few years. The company now has decided to stick with the net horsepower rating in brochures relating to new and future models.

Last year the company printed the dual horsepower figures. The gross figure indicated the engine's maximum capacity with only such essential accessories as oil and water pumps. The net figure represents actual performance with all accessories and normal air-fuel mixture and timing — in other words, what the customer feels in his car.

The company began the dual figures in 1970 in hopes the rest of the industry would standardize ratings. But in the "muscle car" battle it was a forlorn hope.

Fund Expert on Scene

Two Firms Suspended

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chief auditor of the National Contingency Fund arrived from Toronto Thursday and sent to work in the office of West Coast Securities Ltd.

The fund contains about $1.5 million and is set up to compensate clients of a broker or investment dealer if they suffer loss by failure of the broker to meet his liabilities.

West Coast Securities had its trading privileges suspended Wednesday by the Vancouver Stock Exchange when it found itself in difficulty resulting from trade in the shares of Freehold Gas and Oil Ltd.

On Thursday, the Toronto Stock Exchange suspended the trading privileges of Malone, Lynch Securities Ltd., a broker member of that exchange. And Malone, Lynch asked that an interim receiver be appointed to take over management of its affairs. The Toronto exchange notified the National Contingency Fund of its action against the broker.

West Coast Securities is understood to have been suspended because of delay in clearing transactions in Freehold. This delay was attributed by West Coast to the eastern broker.

J. A. Van Luven, president of the Vancouver exchange, reported that Malone, Lynch had failed to pick up bank drafts which were drawn to cover payment for stock purchases.

Meanwhile, Freehold closed at 56 cents on the Vancouver exchange Thursday, down 15 from Wednesday. Last week it reached a top of $3.20 and in the past two weeks has traded close to 3 million shares.

Van Luven said the exchange is continuing an examination with the trading pattern of Freehold being studied, as wel as the financial situation of West Coast.

On Wednesday, Van Luven said the sitation "created working capital problems for West Coast but the company is by no means insolvent."

The National Contingency Fund was set up in 1969 by members of the Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver stock exchanges and the Investment Dealers Association to protect the public from defaults.

Governors of the fund are to meet in Toronto next week to determine what part of the fund should take in the present situation.

No Insurance, No Payments

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal agriculture department will probably not make acreage payments to Prairie rapeseed growers hit by crop-ravaging Bertha army worms.

A department spokesman said Thursday disasters such as the worm attack on rapeseed crops are usually covered by crop insurance.

"But the Saskatchewan Rapeseed Association asked not to be included in legislation requiring crop insurance," he said.

"Hence, there is no insurance for the rapeseed growers."

But, he said, the federal government is providing aid in the form of research and is paying the cost of air-freighting Lannate — a chemical used to destroy the worms — from a stockpile in Houston.

More than 125,000 pounds of Lannate have been supplied to farmers to combat the voracious worms.

Air Canada, CP Air Ready If Fare Battle Erupts

COLOGNE (Reuter) — The West German national airline Lufthansa said Thursday that if a price war breaks out on the North Atlantic routes, it will introduce excursion fares far below those proposed by the Internation Air Transport Association.

The carrier, whose negative vote blocked agreement on a new IATA tariff at the Montreal traffic conference, explained in a written statement that it is opposed to complicating an already-confused fares structure.

Both Air Canada and CP Air said Thursday that they were making plans to introduce fares comparable to the ones worked out at the conference. And there was a chance that the new fares would take place on Feb. 1, 1972, two months before the end of the current price structure.

British Overseas Airways Corp. also said it would strive to start the lower fares.

IATA proposed cuts of about $20 on off-season round-trip group fares between Montreal and London, and reductions of about $17 between New York and London.

But in order to become effective, the fares required the approval of all 40 IATA members and their governments.

Lufthansa was given until Sept. 1 to change its negative vote. If the German carrier does not approve the new fare structure by that date, an open-rate situation would exist next year — meaning that each airline could set its own fares when the current IATA agreement expires in March.

Dr. Herbert Kuhlmann, spokesman for the airline's board of directors, told a news conference Lufthansa will introduce its own fare package Feb. 1.

He said Lufthansa's own plan is simpler than the one presented and voted for in Montreal by the 39 other IATA member airlines.

"There are now 52 rates on the North Atlantic route. The Montreal package would increase them to 69. Lufthansa's own proposal would cut them to nine," he said, adding "our proposed rates are the cheapest offered by anybody."

The airline said it would offer a much cheaper excursion tariff which would be available to all individual passengers except in the high season.

U.S. Dollar Slips; Pressure Returns

LONDON (UPI) — The glut of U.S. dollars roaming Europe and being changed into other currencies drove the U.S. dollar down to a new low in West Germany Thursday and kept it pinned close to its internationally agreed minimum value in other centres.

The selling pressure on the dollar, prompted by fears of devaluation or chances of still higher values for some strong currencies, forced government banks to intervene in money markets to bolster the dollar and prevent it from slipping below its official "floor."

At the same time the persistent hope nursed by gold speculators that the United States may be obliged to change its gold policy spurred new buying Thursday. This pushed the gold price higher to $43.30 an ounce in London, a jump of 35 cents an ounce from Wednesday's level. Gold also climbed in Zurich and Frankfurt.

One foreign exchange dealer said, "it's not the rush to buy marks that caused today's dip for the dollar but the fact that everybody seems to want to sell dollars."

A Bank of France statement Thursday underscored this point.

The bank's routine weekly statement showed more than $250 million worth of foreign exchange flooded into French official reserves in the 10 banking days before the government on Aug. 3 clamped new controls on international currency speculation to kill dollar speculation and betting on an upwards revaluation of the French franc.

In the two weeks ended Aug. 5 the country's foreign exchange reserves grew by $380 million. Since there was no change in the country's official gold holdings the increase was accounted for by an inrush of reserve currencies.

The Aug. 3 controls brought calm to France's money markets and Swiss bankers soon followed by launching their own curbs on foreign funds entering Switzerland and promised still tougher moves to insulate the country from dollar-rocking money movements.

Tyee . . . that is the magic word on the tips of the tongues of ardent sports salmon anglers this week.

Campbell River Tyee Club recorded its first tyee of the season Monday evening. Gold River tyee fishing came on this week, right in front of the mill and at the mouth of the Gold River in Muchalat Inlet. Tyee are now being taken at Franklin River in Alberni Inlet and tackle busters have already been hooked in Nahmint Bay waters.

Two 30-pound tyee were weighted in at the Campbell River Tyee Club Monday night and Wednesday morning John Ebert, guided by Ross Spiers, caught a 44¼-pounder in the Tyee Pool on regulation tackle.

Coho fishing is still close to fantastic in the Campbell River to Comox area, although in the Comox waters some of the coho seem to have drifted down to Denman Island-Hornby Island-Deep Bay waters. But this seems to be a continual shifting with tides and weather.

By 10 a.m. Wednesday, 14 fish had been weighed in at the Gold River Boat Rentals at the docks, and nine of them were tyee (chinooks over 30 pounds) in the 40 and 45-pound class, and one was a 12-pound coho

Quite a few coho are now being taken in Friendly Cove and Hanna Channel waters.

This will be an interesting salmon fishing year at Gold River. It is the year that the tyees should return from the first fry to go out into Muchalat Inlet from Gold River after the pulp mill started. These are the first fish to go out through the effluent and to return through the effluent from the pulp mill. In other years since the mill started the tyee had to return through water that was strange to them. They had out-migrated in the pure water of Muchalat Inlet. Since the pulp mill started operating, tyee fishing has declined in the Gold River area and anglers have moved out to Head Bay and Bligh Island waters at the entrance to the Inlet.

Will it be different this year? So far the outlook has been encouraging.

Gus Beurling has opened his Nahmint Lodge for the season and reports that last weekend several anglers, including himself, hooked big fish in Nahmint Bay, but couldn't hold them. They were tacklebusters. Down inlet a mile or so at Franklin River, Frank Johnson and his son, Mike, hooked a double-header last Friday, a 44.11-pounder and a 32.8-pounder. Ron Hanna and his son also got a doubleheader in tyees at the same spot. San Mateo Bay, still further down inlet, is producing big chinooks and there is good coho and chinook fishing at Bamfield area waters, although fog was presenting a problem.

Alf Walz reports "tremendous" coho fishing at the mouth of the Little Qualicum River. He took eight with his party Wednesday on small Strip Teaser, six ounces of weight and 40 feet of line.

"Nets were out all around us," he said.

Porlier Pass and Active Pass waters are giving up both coho and chinooks, especially in early mornings and the early part of flood tides. Green flies and four to six ounces of weight are taking the coho. Moochers and strip casters are getting the chinooks.

Saanich Inlet fishing continues fair and proof that there are some lunkers to be taken in Saanich Inlet comes from Hector Campbell who took a 40.6-pounder Sunday off The Boulder on Tomick plug.

He has been a VSIAA member for 25 years and only recently let his membership lapse. Otherwise he would have been right in there for Fish of the Year man. He caught it at 2:30 p.m. on his once-a-year cruise of the inlet, on 10 ounces of weight, 75 feet of line. He says it was a real fighter, surfaced half a dozen times, and he had a good audience on shore to back him up.

* * *

Oak Bay fishing is fair. Sam Lane boated three chinooks, one of them 26 pounds and another 18 pounds this week at Oak Bay. Coho are starting to show.

Sooke waters are really starting to produce fish as the early pinks and early coho mingle with the big chinooks. Evelyn Davies caught a 39-pound chinook off Otter Point Monday evening and husband Jumbo got two smaller ones.

Top fish in the third week of the Cowichan Bay Salmon Club chinook ladder derby was a 35.5 pounder landed by Norman Christman. Top junior fish was 11.5-pounder by Ronnie Bell.

The Chinook Club will hold its monthly Sunburn Derby in Saanich Inlet Sunday, dawn to 12 noon.

VSIAA Junior Derby will be held Aug. 29, daybreak until 12 noon, with weigh-ins at Hall's, Anglers-Anchorage, Brentwood Boat Rentals. Any legal size salmon, 12 inches or more, will be eligible, and anyone not over 16 years of age by Aug. 29 may compete for scores of prizes. The Ronnie Sadler trophy will be awarded to top fish caught by a VSIAA member. There will be free pop and ice cream for all competitors.

* * *

Island Pointer Club will hold a CKC-sanctioned trial Sunday at Judge's Farm on West Burnside near Prospect Lake Road, starting at 7 a.m. There will be puppy, derby and gun-dog stakes.

Upper Island Retriever Club will hold a licenced retriever trial Saturday and Sunday near Williams Beach, north of Courtenay.

Canada's Success at Games May Spur Swimming Here

By MAX LOW

Cali and Victoria are more than 4000 miles apart but the Pan-American Games which end today in the Colombian city will have a stunning effect on competitive swimming here.

This, at least, is the belief of Dr. Martin Collis of the University of Victoria.

Collis, a long-time swimming coach and an expert in the theoretical aspects of the sport, said in an interview Thursday the outstanding performances by the Canadian girls in the Games will lead to greatly renewed interest in swimming in Canada and especially in Victoria.

He said people here can't help but be inspired by the efforts of the two Vancouver teenagers, Donna-Marie Gurr and Leslie Cliff, who won three gold medals each despite having to train with limited facilities.

And Collis sees the Games success plus the completion of the new 50-metre pool in Central Park leading to Victoria becoming a "four swimming-club town."

COACHING TALENT

"Victoria has so far been a two-club town with the Olympians and the Cohoes," Collis said. "But there is a lot of coaching talent in town."

Ian Black, formerly of Scotland and a former world record-holder in the 400-metre individual medley, is now living in Victoria.

"Black was a triple gold medal-winner in the Commonwealth Games and is probably the greatest all-round swimmer to come out of Britain," Collis said. "He will be coaching at the YMCA."

"Bill Kirchhoff, director of the Gordon Head pool, is another first-class coach who has done a lot of work in the United States and we can expect to see some class swimmers come from that pool as well," Collis added.

As for local talent, Collis feels there is plenty of it.

"There is always enough talent in any town. It just takes top coaches and plenty of pool time to develop the talent."

MAJOR FACTOR

Collis believes, in fact, that the appointing of Deryk Snelling as coach of the Canadian swim team for the Games has been a major factor in the team's success.

"Snelling began coaching in England with the Southampton Swim Club, which he built up to become probably the strongest club in Europe," Collis said.

"Four years ago, he was offered and accepted a position with the Canadian Dolphins Swim Club in Vancouver.

STRONGEST CLUB

"Working against the odds and without a 50-metre pool, Snelling has developed the Dolphins into the strongest swimming club in Canada and national club champions for the past three years.

"And in that four years he has taken two 12-year-olds and nursed them into Pan-American Games champions and world-class performers," Collis said.

Donna-Marie Gurr was a gold medalist in the 100-metre and 200metre backstroke events and shared in the 400-metre medley team victory. Leslie Cliff was also a member of the medley team and added gold medals in the 200-metre individual medley and the 400-metre individual medley.

Sylvia Dockerill of Vancouver also won a gold medal in the women's 100-metre breaststroke and Collis called the effort of the Canadian women a remarkable feat.

But Collis, who was assistant to coach George Haines at the famous Santa Clara Swim Club in Northern California before coming to UVic two years ago, warned of the danger of assuming that the girls will be gold medalists, or even medalists, in the Olympics in Munich next year.

"We shouldn't expect too much from our girls next year," said Collis, who worked with Snelling in a 10-day swim clinic in Vancouver last December.

"I have a feeling that the American swim team may not have been taking the Pan-Am Games too seriously — the Olympic Games is the most important thing to them and second comes their own national championships," he said.

"I don't think any of the times that won gold medals for our girls at Cali will win gold medals in the Olympics," said Collis, who is mainly concerned at UVic with exercise physiology — the effect on the body of various types of exercise.

Argo Offence Explodes but Defence Gets Game Ball

	W	L	T	F	A	Pts
Toronto	3	0	0	69	31	6
Hamilton	2	0	0	37	32	4
Ottawa	2	2	0	75	62	4
Montreal	1	1	0	43	48	2

MONTREAL — The offence exploded for the points but the defence earned the game ball Thursday night as Toronto Argonauts whipped Montreal Alouettes, 26-14, in Eastern Football Conference action.

Rookie quarterback Joe Theisman scampered 84 yards on a quarterback draw for his first CFL touchdown and passed to Dave Cranmer for a 94-yard scoring play while another rookie, Leon McQuay, sprinted 81 yards for the other Argo touchdown. It was McQuay's fifth touchdown in three games for the unbeaten Argos.

But coach Leo Cahill credited a defence 'that played like wildmen' for the win and the rest of the club agreed as they presented the game ball to rover back Marv Luster.

Luster, who called the defensive signals, also picked off a pass in the dying minutes to kill Montreal's last hopes.

"Although people might think we had the same defence as before, it was different as we were playing a lot of zone," Cahill said.

* * *

The Toronto coach said "Our defensive line is beginning to jell and that's what's going to make us a good ball team."

Ivan MacMillan, picked up after being released by Ottawa Rough Riders two weeks ago, kicked a 10-yard field goal, three converts and a single and punter Zenon Andusyshyn booted a 58-yard single to complete Toronto's scoring.

Tom Pullen scored Montreal's lone touchdown in the fourth quarter on a pass from Sonny Wade. Justin Canale kicked field goals of 37 and 50 yards, George Springate kicked a convert and Wade had a 58-yard single.

* * *

Montreal had 18 first downs in the game compared with 12 for Toronto. The Argos had 477 yards net offence with 258 rushing and 253 passing. Montreal had 317 yards total offence, only 86 yards rushing and 244 yards passing.

Wade and rookie Jim Chasey were good on 18 of 44 passes while Greg Barton and Theismann were 11 for 25 through the air.

Wade punted 12 times for an average of 45 yards while Andrusyshyn had an average of 44 yards on 12 punts.

Toronto		Montreal

Thoroughbred Tops Quarter Horse Rivals

By JIM TANG

Danny Hajnal, general manager of the Vancouver Island Quarter Horse Racing Association, can be pardoned if he doesn't know what to say when he gets asked about the victory Petite Mem scored Thursday at Sandown Park. But he'll smile, and happily.

A quarter horse fancier for some time, Hajnal is building up a stable of speedsters which now includes in Mis Montana Moon one of the favorites for the rich Vancouver Island Quarter Horse Futurity. In his enthusiasm for the breed Hajnal has been heard to comment that there never was a day when a thoroughbred could match a quarter horse at breaking out of the starting gate.

But that was before, still showing his liking for speed, he acquired Petite Mem.

A four-year-old daughter of Whipaway, who is exceptionally fast away, Petite Mem always gets off to a jet-propelled start and often gets six or more lengths on top before her opposition is into stride.

There have, however, been only two victories in the past two seasons because Petite Mem slows perceptibly after a half mile. Hajnal started her at Sandown on opening day in the featured event, she got eight lengths on top in a hurry and then was beaten 14 in the six furlong run.

It seemed obvious Petite Mem should get a shot at the quarter horses, her chance came Thursday over three and a half furlongs in the CKDA Purse and she was almost five lengths on top at the finish. It was a Sandown Park first although Major Trent indicated it was possible earlier in the meet by sneaking through on the rail and dead-heating Terrifics Cowboy.

Mis Montana Moon's wasn't a come-from-behind win. Although breaking from the No. 5 slot in the six-horse field with Dew Dream, a fast-away thoroughbred, and Bob's Dee Quest, a highly-rated quarter horse, on the inside, Petite Mem immediately got her nose out front and was clear before they entered the home-stretch turn.

Victory, his second of the meet, came to Hajnal after Mis Montana Moon, winner of the Canadian Futurity last Saturday, had handily qualified for the V.I. Futurity.

Mis Montanan Moon, whose 18:30 seconds for the 350 yards last Saturday is the fastest of the meet, was no better than third in her trial but it was the fastest of the three trials and she had the third fastest time.

Nineteen tried for the eight spots in the V.I. Futurity final, which offers a purse of $8,596 and will be run on Saturday, Aug. 21, and six finalists came from the third trial and two from the second.

U.S. Team Runs Total To 105 Gold Medals

CALI, Colombia (CP) — Powerful United States athletes and teams have won 105 gold medals out of 193 championships with only a handful of medals to be decided before the final curtain falls today on the 1971 Pan-American Games.

So dominant in practically all sports have the Americans been that they have captured 73 silver medals and added 40 bronze medals as well.

Cuba is in second spot with 30 gold medals, 50 silver and 26 bronze and Canada entered the final day with an 18-20-42 tally.

ONE BRONZE

Canada, going through its first day without a gold medal to add to its total of 18, picked up a bronze medal that gave almost as much satisfaction to the Vancouver-based field hockey team.

Four years ago, the Canadians were the surprise of the tournament as they reached the semi-finals, only to lose their last two matches and wind up without a medal.

The memory was beginning to haunt the current team, which finished second in the eight-country round-robin competition and lost its chance for a gold medal by dropping a 1-0 decision to Mexico.

ONLY GOAL

Playing off against Chile for the bronze medal, the Canadians held a big territorial edge but were frustrated by goal-keeper Jorge Sturmes until fullback Lee Wright beat him with a long shot for the only goal of the game.

Argentina, unbeaten throughout the tournament, defeated Mexico, 1-0, to win the gold medal.

Brazil defeated Cuba, 66-62, in the final game to take the gold medal in women's basketball. The U.S. took the silver medal and the Cubans picked up the bronze.

BREAK THROUGH

The U.S. broke through for its first cycling championship in Pan-Am Games history when John Howard of Springfield, Mo., barely beat Luis Carlos Florez of Brazil in the road race. Jaime Galeano of Colombia took the bronze medal in the 122.7-mile test.

Three Canadian riders were far back.

Gilles Durand of Montreal was 27th, three places ahead of Henk Koning of Calgary and Marc Blouin of Ste. Foy, Que., was 34th.

The swimmers, whose competition ended Wednesday with one world record and 16 games marks broken and a 17th equalled, already were setting their sights on next year's Olympic Games.

EYES ON MUNICH

"Everybody who is anybody in the world has Munich on their minds," said the youngest Pan-Am champion, 13-year-old Cathy Calhoun of California, who broke a Games record in the 800-metre freestyle.

There was room for enthusiasm but not complacency in the Canadian camp as the swimmers counted six gold medals in 14 women's events.

Donna-Marie Gurr's double victory in the backstroke included a 200-metre time that would have been good enough to win the race at the last Olympics. Leslie Cliff set Canadian records in winning the 200 and 400-metre individual medleys.

Angela Coughlan of Burlington, Ont., swam the 200-metre freestyle faster than ever before to equal another winning time in the 1968 Olympics. Yet she finished second.

Eight personal bests were recorded by the Canadian girls during the meet, including three Canadian records and one games record — Miss Gurr's winning time in the 100-metre backstroke.

Dodgers Flub Chance In 13-Inning Tussle

Los Angeles Dodgers hung in there for 13 innings on Thursday night but they missed their chance to gain on San Francisco Giants in major league baseball's tightest pennant race.

Runners-up in the National League West, the Dodgers went under, 1-3, to Philadelphia Phillies when Don Money slammed a double off the outstretched glove of Maury Wills to send in the tie-breaking runs.

The Giants, who are still two games closer to the end of the schedule, were not scheduled. Their lead is now four games with a three-game edge on the losing side.

However, Pittsburgh Pirates lost a bit of ground in the Eastern Division when the third-place St. Louis Cardinals capitalized on Gene Alley's error for three unearned runs in the third inning.

That was all Steve Carlton, who had given up two runs in the first inning, needed. The hard-throwing lefthander settled down to pitch eight shutout innings to wind up with a 3-2 decision, his 16th winning effort of the season.

Carlton also contributed a single after Alley had fumbled a ground ball hit by Del Maxvill. A double by Ted Sizemore, an infield out and a single by Joe Torre sent in the necessary runs.

WIN NO. 19

In the American League, Mickey Lolich, looking for his first major league 20-win season in eight years, earned his 19th victory, helping Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 victory over Milwaukee Brewers. Lolich, now 19-8, scattered six hits and got hitting assistance from battery-mate Bill Freehan, who knocked in the 3-2 run with an eighth-inning triple and scored the winning run on Aurelio Rodriguez' single.

Baltimore maintained its eight-game, Eastern Division margin over the Tigers by tripping Minnesota Twins, 8-2, with first-inning home runs of Merv Rettenmund and Don Buford.

CREEP UP

New York Yankees crept to within a half game of Detroit, taking a doubleheader from California Angels, 3-0 and 2-1.

Cleveland Indians downed Chicago White Sox, 6-2, giving starter Mike Paul a six-run cushion to work with by the fourth inning.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Saanich Evening Optimists and Washington's Everett team will meet in the winners' bracket final tonight in the Babe Ruth 15-year-old Pacific Northwest regional baseball tournament here.

The British Columbia champions from Victoria scored their second come-from-behind win in the eight-team, double-knockout tournament Wednesday, beating host-team East Anchorage, 8-2.

Everett's Steve Robinette threw a one-hitter and struck out 15 to lead Washington to a 3-0 victory over state-champion West Anchorage Wednesday.

Evening Optimists, who opened the tourney with a4-2 decision over Madison, Ore., Tuesday, erased Anchorage's two-run lead with a five-run barrage in the bottom of the third inning. Big blow was Bob Wilson's bases-loaded triple. Wilson finished with four runs batted in with a double and triple.

Saanich's other big hitter was Kevin Alexander who had a single, double and triple. Wayne Krimmer, who scattered six hits, struck out six batters and allowed two bases on balls.

Langford Wins Opener

Pitcher Wade Burns twirled a four-hitter and helped his own cause by doubling in pinch-runner Ken MacCaskell in the bottom of the seventh inning to enable Langford Drywall to edge Century Inn, 6-5, Thursday night.

The victory gave Langford a 1-0 lead in the best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League semi-final series.

Langford led, 4-0, after Cec Ferguson's two-run homer had sparked a four-run burst in the second inning. But Century fought back with Don Frampton's two-run homer in the fourth inning and a three-run rally in the sixth inning to tie the game. Ron Yardley singled in Rocky Tyler for Langford's other run in the fourth inning.

Cougars Trade Oil Kings

Victoria Cougars, looking to the future as well as the immediacy of their first season in the Western Canada Hockey League, Thursday announced a trade with Edmonton Oil Kings which brings five players in exchange for two.

Leaving the Cougars to join the WCHL champions are forwards Chris Riddell and Lon Myles.

In return, the Cougars are to get goalkeeper Brian Newbert, defencemen Dave Okranic and Jan Kascak, forward Phil Blake and a player to be named by Oct. 1.

A one-time figure-skating star, Blake started with the Victoria Minor Hockey Association and played with the Racquet Club midgets the season before he went to Edmonton. Smallish but sturdy, he is an exceptionally good skater and was rated the fastest man on his club last season.

Newbert, who told manager Eric Bishop that he played his first hockey in Memorial Arena when he was about seven years old, played with the Oil Kings' juvenile team last season. He was used in one WCHL game, allowed one goal and came out a winner.

Okranic is a 180-pounder who won a spot with the Oil Kings at training camp last season but became homesick and returned to Fort St. John.

Kascak played his hockey in Penticton last season.

MAJOR FACTOR

Age of the incoming players was a major factor in making the trade. The Cougars are looking ahead to their second and third WCHL seasons and are acquiring as many players as possible with two or more junior seasons left.

Newbert is the only 19-year-old in the new lot. Blake is 18 and Okranic and Kascak are both 17.

To add youth and numbers, the Cougars gave up two of their better operatives of last season. Riddell was fourth in the B.C. Junior Hockey League point race with 36 goals and 61 assists while Miles had 26 goals and 20 assists. However, both are 19 and the upcoming season is their last in junior hockey.

"We hated to let them go," Bishop said, "but it is necessary to give up something to get something and we are looking for young players whom we think have a chance to develop into outstanding juniors and become the nucleus of our team in a year or two."

Ticehurst Grabs Lead Despite Cool Finish

OAKFIELD, N.S. (CP) — An unhappy Bert Ticehurst of Vancouver three-putted the last three greens but still managed to go into a two-stroke lead after two rounds Thursday in the Canadian Amateur golf championship.

"I'm a little happy," said Ticehurst after firing a one-over-par 74 for a 145. "Too many three-putts."

Ticehurst, who shared the first-round lead with Doug Silverberg after both shot 71s, had his task made a little easier in the second round when the Calgary golfer blew up with a 78.

Three Americans and one Canadian were tied with 147s in second place in the four-day, 72-hole event.

One of the Americans, John Sale of Calaise, Me., had an opportunity to take the lead going into the final hole but he four-putted the 18th green and had to be content with a 71.

Also at 147 were Jimmy Wittenberg of Memphis, Tenn., Dick Siderowf of Easton, Conn., and Andre Gagne of Boischatel, Que.

MICK MISSES CUT

The field was cut to 65 golfers with only those with 158 totals or beter playing in the final 36 holes today and Saturday.

One of those who failed to make the cut was Dave Mick of Victoria, sadly below form in both of the first two rounds. Mick, who led B.C. to victory in the Willingdon Cup with a 142 total on Monday and Tuesday, added an 83 Thursday to his 82 Wednesday for a 165 total.

GREAT RECOVERY

Ticehurst covered the front nine in regulation 36, with a great recovery on the par-four ninth hole.

After hitting a good tee shot on the 369-yard hole, the westerner shanked his approach shot onto the adjoining first fairway. He had to chip past some trees to get to the green but then holed a downhill 25-foot putt to earn his par for the half. He was one over par on the back nine.

DISASTROUS FINAL

Sale was four strokes under par coming to the final hole.

His tee shot dropped just in front of a small tree on the fairway and he had to alter his swing for the approach shot.

Sale went to the back of the green — some 80 feet from the pin — with the approach shot. His first putt was short, the second skipped past the cup and he needed two more putts to get down.

"I had a six-foot approach putt but the ball took a tricky break to the left. It just missed the hole and kept rolling. I didn't think the green was really that fast."

The greens were dampened by a heavy early morning rain. Ticehurst said he found that the rain made the greens much easier to play.

Silverberg, a member of the Alberta Willingdon Cup team, fell apart on the front nine, going over par on five holes.

On the par-three fifth hole, he took a seven. He had a two-under-par 35 on the back nine.

Seven golfers, including four-time Canadian amateur champion, Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont., came in with 151s.

Two Ex-Champs In Seniors Final

An all-American final between two former champions was set up Thursday in the 49th annual Seniors North West Golf Association tournament at Victoria Golf Club.

Harry Givan of Seattle, the beaten finalist last year against Bill Thompson of Victoria, eliminated Max Hunter of Olympia, 4 and 3, in a semi-final match. Givan disposed of Thompson in Tuesday's quarter-final on the 18th hole.

Schlee Takes Lead With Hot Putter

The 32-year-old Schlee turned in a sizzling round of seven birdies and just a single bogey under a hot afternoon sun.

Schlee needed just 30 putts in touring the 7212-yard Pleasant Valley course. He went out in two-under-par 34, then added four birdies on his second nine.

DeWitt Weaver, started he 72-hole tournament with a 35-33—68 with the help of an eagle three on the 553-yard 11th hole.

Jerry Heard, who fashioned his first tour victory in the American Golf Classic last weekend, and Doug Sanders were in a group with 70s. Sam Snead, at 59 the oldest player in the 150-man field, had a 71, while host — pro Paul Harney carded 72.

Canadians George Knudson and Ben Kern, both of Toronto, had 71 and 73, respectively.

Poor Ron Collins—His Name Is Jinxed

By DON WHAT'S-HIS-NAME

Funny thing about names: get one wrong and all kinds of things can happen.

This point is one of the first impressed on fledgling newspaper reporters. However, nothing much is said if the situation is reversed — if the newspaper, for instance, gets the reporter's name wrong.

Which can happen, you know, despite all the talk about accuracy.

Just the other day I was mildly surprised to find my name had been changed through a typographical error. The byline read: By Don Campbell. It was in the Colonist Island edition and disappeared altogether in the home edition — the one that gets local delivery.

This wouldn't have bothered me too much. I mean, after all, both Collins and Campbell start with the letter C. And the first name was right. How much can a guy ask for?

But it bothered my wife.

"What's all this?" she said, waking me up. "You told me you couldn't pick me up because you were working on a story that had to do with telegraph offices closing down."

"So?"

"So, what are you trying to pull? Don Campbell did that story — not you."

I tried to explain that Don Campbell was the figment of someone's imagination. But she didn't speak to me for the rest of the day.

My name, simple as it may seem, has long been a source of trouble. People keep getting me confused with someone else.

When I was 14 I entered a swimming competition in Toronto and was eliminated in the preliminaries. The next week my name was called out when the surviving swimmers appeared for the finals.

A friend stepped forward to correct the oversight.

"There must be a mistake," he shouted. "Don Collins was eliminated last week."

With that a strapping big kid — looking as hard as nails — grabbed him by the neck, snarling: "Tryin' to get me put out, eh," and tossed him in the pool.

There were other occasions when a second Don Collins cropped up.

In a Northern Ontario town an irate woman phoned me to say: "Do something about those dances you're running or I'll call the cops."

Trouble was, I wasn't running any dances. I tried to find the wayward Don Collins who was responsible. It sounded like an interesting venture.

The best was yet to come.

In Kitchener, Ont., my wife answered the phone to hear a sweet young thing say: "Tell Donnie-Wonnie to pick me up at eight."

This, you might readily understand, caused some bad moments.

Luckily we both discovered that "Donnie-Wonnie" was another Don Collins who played basketball and drove a sports car — neither of which I was much good at.

In the same city I received in the mail one day a card showing I was a member of the Musicians' Union.

The act lasted exactly 12 seconds, having been interrupted rather rudely by the manager of the cocktail bar. But then, he was no judge of talent.

Until recently, I was sure I had left all this name trouble behind me in Eastern Canada. It seemed the Don Collinses who swim in races, play basketball, know sweet young things, run bad dances and play musical instruments had stayed behind to bother each other.

But not I'm beginning to wonder: Is one of them out here posing as Don Campbell? Who is Don Campbell? Why is this happening to me?

King Fisherman

Big Coho—or Chinook? Lab Tests Will Decide

An 18-pound salmon from Campbell River may have stepped into the King Fisherman Contest coho division lead, but there still remains the all-important point of identification.

Mrs. Joan Nickerson of Campbell River, caught her big fish July 28 on herring, and some pretty knowledgeable fishermen at Campbell River identified it as a coho.

But, that identification is not necessarily acceptable by King Fisherman officials. However Mrs. Nickerson did send scales down to the biological station at Nanaimo.

But, it is highly unlikely that biologists can tell the difference between a coho and a chinook by the scales alone. Both these species spend some time in fresh water and their scales would be similar. It would be possible to tell the difference between a pink or chum and a chinook or coho because they spend varying times in freshwater.

But, Mrs. Nickerson has done the proper thing. She has kept the intestines of the fish frozen and she will be able to take the stomach, with the pyloric caeca, the long stringy things, like worms, attached to the end of the stomach, to a biologist to have the fish positively identified. A spring (chinook) has 140 to 185 of them, a coho salmon has only 45 to 60.

If her big fish proves to be a coho she will be in line for the King Fisherman trophy for the biggest coho of the contest, although there is still plenty of time to knock her out of that position. And she will almost certainly win a gold Coho Prince button.

Meanwhile the leading coho remain two 14.8-pound coho from Otter Point, one taken by G. Brown and the other by Jumbo Davies.

Japan Eyes UN Seat For China

That was the word Wednesday from Naka Funada, speaker of the Japanese house of representatives, who was in Victoria with 11 other members of the house.

He said his country was presently negotiating with the U.S. on terms for giving China UN membership.

Funada said the talks were concerned chiefly with ensuring that the interests of the Taiwan government were protected.

The Japanese parliamentarians were guests at a provincial luncheon in Victoria Tuesday. Wednesday afternoon, the group toured the Crofton kraft mill.

They then headed for Vancouver, Kelowna and Vernon. They arrive in Ottawa Aug. 18 for talks with House of Commons speaker Lucien Lamoureux.

Hugh Manke, former Saigon director of the International Voluntary Services, said the Saigon government is ousting the group to prevent its volunteers from reporting on election frauds in the Oct. 3 presidential election. Many volunteers did that during the 1967 presidential election, Manke said.

Manke said the final decision was made Monday by Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam at a meeting with IVS executive director Richard Peters, who flew here from Washington to plead the group's cause, and fired Manke in an attempt to appease Lam.

Manke said Peters did not get any help from U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker or U.S. aid director John Mossler at meetings with them last week. Manke said it appeared the Americans and South Vietnamese were in league against even the tiny IVS presence that remained here.

The number of IVS volunteers has declined from a high of 180 in 1968 to a current total of 31, Manke said.

PARIS (UPI) — Hanoi's chief negotiator failed to attend Thursday's session of the Vietnam peace talks and his absence was interpreted as a possible sign of displeasure over uncertainty about the arrival date of the new U.S. chief negotiator.

Xuan Thuy did not attend the 125th session because he was "slightly indisposed," North Vietnamese officials said. Philip Habib is temporarily in charge of the U.S. delegation, until the arrival of the new leader, Ambassador William Porter, from Saigon.

Volunteers Ousted By Saigon

SAIGON (UPI) — A Quaker-sponsored group that brought volunteer teachers and agricultural experts to South Vietnam for 14 years has been ordered out of the country by Aug. 31, a former official of the group said Thursday.

Northerners Interrupt 42-Day Lull

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese forces opened a series of attacks along the demilitarized zone Thursday, only six days after the last major U.S. ground unit pulled out of the region. The fighting broke a 42-day lull across South Vietnam.

The North Vietnamese launched three ground assaults and at least six shelling attacks in South Vietnam's northern-most Quang Tri province.

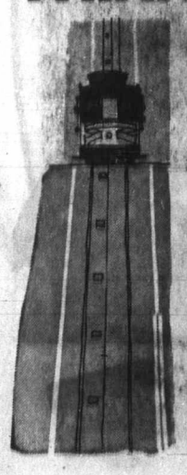

At least 15 government troops were reported killed and 21 wounded. North Vietnamese losses were put at 26 killed.

Sheriff checks 'Wyoming Green'

'Wyoming Green'

A New High On Mountains

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — Those who use it call it "Wyoming green," but to police and narcotic agents it may be a new problem drug of seemingly unlimited supply.

Agents in Billings, Mont., began buying Wyoming green last week from area pushers.

At first they thought it was alfalfa but a chemical field test showed a strong marijuana reaction.

The agents traced the plant to the rugged mountains above Casper where they said "five acres of green marijuana grew unnoticed."

The agents and sheriffs deputies destroyed the five-acre field last week.

Said one agent: "We found it easily. But then we saw it growing everywhere. There's a whole damn mountain of it."

Agents took stalks, leaves, and flower samples of the plant to Billings for tests.

One botanist said the plant is not a member of the marijuana or hemp family, but possibly could be a species of the rose family.

Sheriff James Meeks of Yellowstone County said a botanist told him it is possible to get a marijuana reaction from a non-marijuana plant.

Whatever the plant is, those who smoke it don't seem to care about its classification.

If results are positive, it means the mountains around Casper and elsewhere in Montana could become a drug mecca.

But if the results are negative, Meeks said the consequences could be even more startling.

He said the "infallible" field test for marijuana, accepted by the courts, no longer will apply.

It is possible the plant could turn out to be a new type of hallucinogenic.

Seattle Saga

Neighbor in Need Is Lucky Indeed

SEATTLE (AP) — Residents of this economically depressed area are helping feed hungry neighbors under a volunteer program composed more of sharing than charity.

Neighbors in Need operates 34 food banks in the Seattle area, and distributed 33,000 cases of free food in the first six months of operation. It receives no government aid.

Seattle's soaring unemployment rate, now 15 per cent with reductions in the aircraft and aerospace industry, created a new class of poor-persons who, despite their inability to put food on the table, did not qualify for government assistance under current regulations.

The program was founded last November by three church groups and now involves about 300 churches.

Rev. Hal Perry, one of the program's founders, says he and others discovered many hungry persons could not get help under existing programs. Persons without cooking facilities cannot get government food stamps, nor can single persons 18 to 50 years old. Some recently-unemployed middle-class families own too much property to qualify for state or federal help.

At first, the organization served an estimated 8,000 persons a week but the number jumped after the state reduced welfare allowances in April.

Customers are predominantly older persons, many of them 40 to 50 years old, often with families and some out of work for the first time in their lives.

Food comes from everywhere, said Peggy Maze, coordinator for one food bank in the city's central area.

A man who obtained food from the food banks twice while searching for a job came back a few weeks later and endorsed his first paycheque over to the program.

Truckloads of potatoes, beans and fresh vegetables have come from farmers, produce wholesalers and food packers in the farming areas of eastern Washington.

Daughter, Wife Attackers

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — When 72-year-old Ernest Underwood stepped out of his apartment Wednesday night to get a breath of air, he was attacked by two persons dressed in dark clothing with stocking masks over their faces.

Underwood was stabbed repeatedly with a Bowie knife by one of the assailants while the other fired several shots from a 38-calibre pistol — all of which missed.

Fighting for his life, Underwood grappled with the pair and they rolled on the ground until all three were soaked in blood.

Police said that Underwood, who was in fair condition at Huntington Hospital Thursday, told them he finally pulled the mask off one of his attackers.

It was his spinster daughter, Mildred, 52, an insurance secretary. The other assailant arrested on the scene was his wife, Amey, 71. Police said there had been a bitter separation of the family recently. The two women were booked on suspicion of assault with intent to commit murder.

Top Canoe Nets $490

Each member of the Manitoba crew that won the B.C. Centennial canoe pageant Thursday night was awarded $70 in B.C. centennial dollars, while lesser amounts went to all other seven-man crews.

The Manitobans were also each presented with special gold medals, the runners-up from New Brunswick received silver medals and the third-place Quebecers were awarded bronze medals.

Legal Battle in Pakistani Prison

Awami Chief Fights On

LYALLPUR Pakistan (AP) — Despite the Pakistani military regime's determination to keep secret the trial of outlawed Awami League leader Sheikh Mujibur Rahman it appears the rebel leader is waging a legal battle for freedom here.

The battle is apparently being fought behind the 15-foot-high red brick walls of the heavily-guarded unfinished prison four miles north of this central Punjabi city 1,000 miles from the home.

Reports from workers inside the prison say the East Pakistani rebel is existing in one air-conditioned room on a rice diet with a physician in attendance.

An officer of Frontier Force Regiment who identified himself as Major Harley Thursday told reporters no one occupies the jail and no trial is going on inside.

Acknowledging a half-dozen camouflaged foxholes from which machine-gun barrels poked the major said "We are having an exercise."

But in town troops of the same regiment were standing guard at the Circuit House in the agricultural university grounds where sentries said a brigadier was in residence "because of Mujibur Rahman."

Campus sources said the army has virtually taken over 10 brick bungalows at the university as quarters and offices for officers connected with the trial.

The Pakistan military trying the sheikh for "waging war against Pakistan," has not even announced the trial has started, after stating Monday it would start Wednesday.

Savage Scores Police for Lost Revenue

The Victoria Police Commission will seek the provincial government's help in blocking future attempts by the city's police force to "manipulate the tax resources of local government to serve their own end."

Acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage told a meeting of Victoria city council Thursday the commission would seek advise from the attorney-general and the labor minister on how to prevent loss of revenue as a result of work-to-rule policies adopted by Greater Victoria police forces during recent contract negotiations.

In a prepared statement, Savage lashed out at police for adopting tactics that "deprive the citizens of this community of the protection they require and the city of anticipated tax revenues from fines."

Savage, who as acting mayor is also acting chairman of the Victoria Police Commission, said he doesn't begrudge the policemen a decent wage, but is dismayed at the tactics with which they back their demands.

"While I cannot comprehend the logic that has led the very men in this community who are sworn to uphold the law to behave so irresponsibly as to violate their oath of office and their own union constitution in relation to a matter which is so obviously one of self-interest, steps must be taken to prevent this happening again," Savage said.

Savage told council the commission plans to seek support from the police commissions of Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay in its endeavor to block work-to-rule orders in the future.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis told the Colonist he would take up the matter with the attorney-general and with the Saanich Police Union.

The police had in fact, he said, "manipulated the law" to back up their wage demands.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said in an interview she would support the Victoria Police Commission's proposal, but only on the grounds that a police force working to rule may lose a great deal of efficiency and deprive the public of protection.

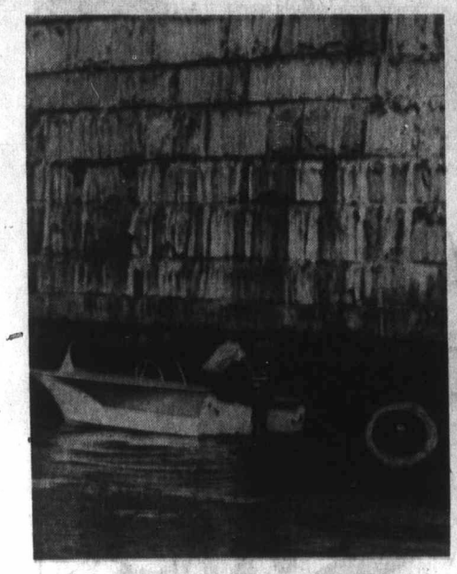

"I don't look upon our police department as a revenue-producing department," she said.

In a settlement of the wage dispute last week, police of the four core municipalities accepted a 15-month-wage increase of 12.2 per cent. Ratification by the respective police commissions is expected later this month.

The increase will raise a first-class constable's salary from $728 to $861 by Jan. 1. The contract expires March 31, 1972.

The Maya Clinic Of Inner Harbor

Loffmark Allows Overspending On Hospital Sites

The Capital Region's Hospital board Thursday was given provincial government clearance to proceed with the purchase of two important hospital sites.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark announced that he has given the board approval to buy land needed for the expansion of St. Joseph's and another site on Helmcken Road for an extended-care centre without getting the ratepayer's sanction in a referendum.

In the regional hospital referendum of 1968, voters approved $225,000 for land acquisition. However, much more money than that will be needed for the two new sites and Loffmark has exercised his statutory authority in allowing the regional board to exceed that sum.

Mayor J. B. Cumming of North Saanich, deputy chairman of the regional hospital board, said the purchase will be made from the Sisters of St. Ann, owners of the property, on a square footage basis and the sum might be close to $900,000.

The agreement is that the purchase will coincide with a number of transactions between the board, the Sisters of St. Ann, provincial government and the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society that will end with the government leasing the existing hospital to SVIHS.

It will be a long-term lease, at $1 a year but it will have clauses that will give the minister the power to terminate it on relatively short notice even if he needed legislative consent.

The second site involves about 35 acres near Saanich's western boundary and would cost roughly $348,000, including sewer extension.

It would be used for a 225-bed extended care hospital, made up of the 150 beds, that once was assigned to St. Joseph's and 75 beds that at one time were designated for St. Mary's Priory, 567 Goldstream.

There are indications that this hospital will be operated by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, using the administration that already exists at the Priory.

Greenery, More Open Space in New Proposal

Reid Down to Pair of Towers

By HUBERT BEYER

It was a day of reconciliation Thursday between Victoria aldermen and Vancouver developer J. A. Reid, proponent of the much-maligned $25 million Reid Centre.

Following a special three-hour meeting at city hall, most of the aldermen present, the developer, the city planner and the developer's architect said a great deal had been accomplished.

No new definite proposal was put forth by Reid for development along the waterfront on Wharf below Bastion Square, but aldermen hammered out a new set of guidelines for any project on the Reid site.

They also decided to strike a committee which is to work out a new design for the project that could be satisfactory to the city and assure the developer of an adequate return on his investment.

These are the new terms of reference according to which Vancouver architect Gerald Hamilton will prepare a revised scheme for the Reid Centre:

- Only two highrise towers will be permitted on the site, instead of three as previously proposed.
- Reid will either donate to the city or set aside a strip of land directly adjacent to the Inner Harbor waterfront for development as a green belt, similar to the Gorge beautification project. The public will have access to this promenade.
- The public is also to allowed access to the waterfront side of the project at Wharf Street level, above the green belt, for an unimpeded view of the Inner Harbor.
- The floor-space ratio of the development is to be limited to 3.5 to 1. This means that any buildings on the site are limited to a total floor space of three and one-half times the area of the site.

The committee, which is to work out details of a new proposal in accordance with the guidelines, consists of Ald. Harold Olafson, chairman of the city's community development committee; Ald. Peter Pollen, last year's chairman of that committee and most outspoken critic of the original proposal; City Planner Geoffrey Greenhalgh; Reid and Hamilton.

The general mood of the meeting was one of optimism. Reid said later, "This has been the best meeting in the entire two years."

Hamilton told the meeting Reid was a "most enlightened developer" who wants to build something he can be proud of.

"He's not out to rape Victoria," the architect said.

For a while, Hamilton defended his original concept. The three towers, he said, were architecturally a more pleasing composition than two towers would be.

The third tower, Hamilton said, was to have been built in the water "because I thought it was a fun thing to do."

But if council didn't want three towers, he wouldn't insist on them, he said.

It was Pollen who asked whether Reid would be willing to donate a strip of land "30, 40 or 50 feet wide" for use as a green belt.

Reid said he had no objection, but may be forced to simply set it aside for this use, rather than donate it to the city, because he had secured financing of the project on the basis of the entire property.

In any case, he said, he'd be willing to freeze the strip of land along the waterfront for use as a public promenade with trees, lawn and flowers.

Pollen, who has been credited by the developer and council with holding up the original proposal, said at the meeting creation of the promenade would be an "immeasurable contribution" to the city by Reid.

A word of caution came from Ald. Tom Christie who warned the meeting that further highrise construction would place an intolerable load on the city's present sewage system.

At the meeting, Christie voted against adoption of the new guidelines, but at a regular council meeting the same afternoon, he abstained from voting which, according to the city's procedural bylaw, means an affirmative vote.

Aldermen Hugh Ramsay, Robert Baird, Pollen and Olafson and acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage voted in favor. Aldermen Ove Witt and Percy Frampton weren't at the meeting.

Zone Law Repeal Wanted

Victoria city council has asked the provincial government to repeal legislation that gives the municipal affairs minister the power to overrule regional boards in zoning matters and deal directly with land promoters.

An amendment to the B.C. Municipal Act giving the minister the power was passed at the last session of the Legislature.

A motion urging repeal of the amendment was introduced by Ald. Peter Pollen at Thursday's meeting of city council and received unanimous support from aldermen.

Pollen said it was "extremely dangerous" to let such power remain in the hands of one man.

Council also decided to submit the motion to next month's convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities in Victoria.

It is past the deadline for resolutions to be considered by the UBCM's resolution committee but council hopes an exception will be made in this case.

Choice Flusters Chinatown

Flags Split Rallying

Taiwan

Peking

By DON COLLINS

Elsewhere, it's a story of threats and fears.

But in Victoria, the main problem is reportedly one of deciding which of two flags to rally around.

Sources from the city's Chinese community say they know of no cases of threats being made against anyone for anti-communist sentiments since Canada recognized the People's Republic of China last year.

They say, however, that the new relationship has caused some difference of opinion on what flag should be flown at oficial functions—the flag of Nationalist China, or the flag of mainland China.

While this question goes looking for an answer, former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker is trying to focus attention on something of a more sinister nature.

Diefenbaker said in an Ottawa interview that many people of Chinese descent have told him they are afraid of coercive action because of their anti-communist leanings.

He called for government investigation into claims of harassment.

The Chinese Benevolent Association in Vancouver wrote Diefenbaker to report that two unnamed Chinese publications had threatened violent action against "remnant nationalist elements." The association also said anonymous telephone callers had carried on a campaign of intimidation.

In Victoria one member of the Chinese community said: "This is the first I have heard of anything like this."

Another said: "I'm sure nothing like this is taking place here. Victoria doesn't seem to be the centre of any kind of activity at any time."

"We're a little more civilized here," one Chinese-Canadian said.

Some said the Chinese communist element was much smaller here than it is in such centres as Vancouver.

"But the flag problem," said one source — "that's something else again. Since all of this started no one knows which flag to put up at official ceremonies.

"If you put up the flag of the People's Republic right away they will say you are pro-communist. Then, if you put up the flag for nationalist China people will start saying that this isn't right, that isn't really the flag of China."

What has been the upshot?

"Well, it's getting so people just stay away from the functions altogether," the source said.

Another source likened it to the debate that raged for a time when the new Canadian flag first came into being.

"You had your die-hards who kept arguing in favor of the Red Ensign," he said, "This may turn out to be a little the same."

'I Think Death Is Sort of Beautiful'—Teen

By RICHARD SCHNEIDER

DENVER (UPI) — Lyn Helton's brown eyes started a smile that spread down her face and her words were soft and happy: "I've learned how to love people. I'm not afraid to say, 'Hey, I love you'."

She is a teenaged wife and mother of an 18-month-old daughter. She also is dying.

Lyn Helton, "19, almost 20," has a rare bone cancer that will kill her, perhaps within months, according to doctors. But she said she is happy.

"Being this close to death, I realize how important it is to love everything I can. I think death is sort of beautiful," she said, talking slowly at the kitchen table of the three-room, $97-a-month apartment she shares with her husband Tom, a photographer and musician, and her daughter Jennifer.

"My whole outlook has changed because of this. I've I would have normally. I realize things that probably would have taken years to realize — just matured a lot faster than things like caring for and respecting people."

She is writing a book — "a kind of autobiography" — in which she will describe her thoughts of death. "I'm trying to get across how it feels to be dying and raising children at the same time," she said.

Last month, a boy, perhaps 9 or 10, broke into her apartment and stole the tape recorder and tapes she used for dictating her thoughts on death. She pleaded publicly for the thief to return them, but he never did. So a new recorder was donated and again she is working on her book.

"I've read lots of articles about people who have had cancer and lived. But readers get a false impression from this," she said. "I've never read an article by someone who is dying.

"I think if I'd seen something like that it would have helped me get through a lot of emotional pain."

Mrs. Helton said her husband has learned to face her death just as she has. "He's really mellow. His philosophy is take it as it comes. He's accepted it very well."

But her daughter is another matter.

"Jennifer knows there is something wrong with me. Sometimes — I don't know why, it's very strange — she'll cry when she sees my crutches," the young mother said.

Mrs. Helton first learned she had osteo sarcoma shortly after her child was born. She already has lost the use of one leg and must walk on crutches. She said the treatments were more difficult to face than the disease.

"Having cancer was just having this lump in my leg and it hurt," she said. "They gave me radiation. It burned my leg very badly and I lost the use of it. My hair fell out. I lost weight. The trugs made me vomit for eight hours in a row and I couldn't eat for three days."

She stopped the radiation treatments as well as dosages of three powerful cancer drugs, which merely slowed the growth of the cancer.

"For me, mentally, the drugs were worse than having the disease," she said. "I would rather die in a shorter length of time with a happy state of mind than take the drugs and be unhappy and mentally deficient."

And Lyn Helton has hope to go with the love she feels for everbody. She said she has more important things to do in her short time left than worry about dying.

"Doctors say osteo sarcoma is a fatal disease. There's a 10 per cent survival rate. If you're lucky you hit the 10 per cent."

Liquor's Quicker Way To Go—Aged

By DAVID NAGY

MOSCOW (UPI) — Sherali Mislimov swears he's never had a drop of vodka, except once, in 1831.

Mejed Agayev says nothing stronger than milk and cold spring water has passed his lips since he was born, in 1838.

Ivan Tsukanov calls drinking and smoking "disgusting habits" and has forbidden them to the 76 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren who have joined his family tree since 1871.

The old men of the hills of Azerbaidjan, Georgia and other Soviet longevity centres regale the public fairly often with the secrets of how they got that way, somewhat in the manner of a great athlete tipping his fans on how to do it.

Newspapers carry forth the word. Some of the advice is contradictory, but much of it is consistent from Siberia to Armenia. And most of it confirms the suspicions of those dedicated to the proposition "a short life but a merry one."

Mislimov, who is touted by the Soviets as the oldest man in the world at 166 years, is typical. He told Komsomolskaya Znamia (Youth League Banner) newspaper recently, "The only time I drank a glass of vodka was 140 years ago.

'I was forced to drink to the health of a very wicked man named Kadir Bek," said the Azerbaidjani villager. "Otherwise I would never have drunk such poison."

That advice seems to go for alcohol in general, amost unanimously among Soviet centenarians. But a notable exception comes from the southern republic of Georgia.

The 2,000 centenarians in Josef Stalin's mountainous homeland "drink natural wines willingly, but not to excess," Prof. Grigory Pitskhelauri said in another recent report.

In fact the Georgians — renowned as horsemen, dancers and romancers — seem to have more fun growing old than any of the other graybeard groups in the nation. Take the matter of diet.

"Their diet consists of traditional peppery Georgian food, and they eat lots of vegetables and fruit, meat and milk products, honey and cheese," Pitskhelauri said.

Compare that with Mislimov's menu, which includes breakfast of a boiled lamb cutlet and a glass of sour milk. Or with that of Agayev, another Azerbaidjani, who claims 133 years and who eats only dairy products. Or that of Tsukanov, a 100-year-old Musoovite, who says he "eats meat only twice a week, always boiled, and prefers dairy products."

All the oldsters shun smoking, even the Georgians, and most credit a lifetime of hard outdoor work like farming as a major factor in their longevity.

A 109-year-old Armenian woman named Tagui Arakelyan, however, skipped all that and offered a much simpler formula for a long life.

Brazilian Dies At 154

GOIANIA, Brazil (LAT) — Brazil's oldest woman, Delfina da Costa Freire, has died in the wooden shack not far Goias where she had spent most of her life.

She was 154 years old — and just in case anyone might doubt this, she had left her birth certificate in a prominent place.

U.S. Agency Labels Minibikes Hazards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S federal government warned parents Wednesday that their children risk death or serious injury if they are permitted to ride minibikes — those small, low-slung bicycles powered by noisy lawnmower engines — on streets and sidewalks

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimated that more than 1.5 million minibikes will be in operation in the United States by tne end of the year, most of them ridden by children between the ages of 10 and 14.

More and more young children are going to be killed unless they and their parents recognize the dangers involved in the use of minibikes," the agency said.

"While off-street riding under parental supervision can be a safe and popular recreation, the minibike becomes a high-risk vehicle on sidewalks and roadways," it said. "The agency categorically opposes all use of minibikes on sidewalks or streets."

The two-wheeled minibikes, which have been on the commercial market about three years, usually are powered by a one-cylinder engine of five horsepower or less and can reach a maximum speed of 25 to 45 miles per hour, depending on size.

The agency said minibikes are "noted for poor handling characteristics because of their short wheel base and small tires," they lack the acceleration needed for highway driving and are difficult for motorists to see because of their small size. The seats on standard models are only about two feet high.

The agency had no statistics on deaths or injuries already attributed to minibikes, but a spokesman said the government and safety groups were "convinced the problem is serious."

Many localities outlaw minibikes on streets and sidewalks because their lack of headlights and proper braking systems disqualify them for licensing.

The government warned parents that a typical homeowner's public liability insurance policy probably would not cover minibike accidents, and that "family auto insurance policies give no protection at all" for an unlicensed minibike rider.

Greater Victoria area gardeners will compete this weekend for honors in the Victoria Gladiolus and Dahlia Society's 25th anniversary show.

The show will open at 2 p.m. Saturday and run to 10 p.m., then from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday at the Esquimalt Municipal Sports Centre.

Gladiolus, begonias and fuchsias will be included in the exhibits, including a large arrangement section. A cut flower booth will be operated. Other booths will include garden and outdoor living ideas, hand-painted items, buricraft jewelry and nurseries.

Ceramocraft will be demonstrated, as well as bottle cutting.

Ald. Ed de Costa of Esquimalt will present trophies at 3 p.m. Sunday. Col. Alfred Hood will give the centennial trophy donated by the Victoria Centennial committee. Blooms will be auctioned.

Coalition Will Lobby For Population Curb

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's population will be as dense as India's in 100 years unless families are limited to two children each, according to a new group formed to lobby for national U.S. policies of population control.

Formation of the Coalition for a National Population Policy was announced Tuesday by two of its leaders, former Sen. Joseph Tydings, MD., and Dr. Milton Eisenhower, acting president of Johns Hopkins University.

Eisenhower said the coalition would lobby for the adoption of pending legislation to establish a national policy "stabilizing" the population at an average of two children per family "consistent with human rights and individual conscience."

Tydings and Eisenhower said the overall goal is a zero population growth — a situation where the number of babies born and immigrants arriving each year equals the number of deaths and persons leaving the country.

The group said the nation's population will double by the end of this century if present trends continue and will be as dense as India's by 100 years from now.

"The conclusion to be drawn from these demographic projections is stark and ineludible," said Tydings. "either we must act now to develop rational, voluntary policies and programs to stabilize U.S. population size, or face the possibility of a drastic deterioration in the quality of national life and the collapse of many of our cherished institutions under the sheer weight of human numbers."

With the population now at 208 million and cities unable to cope with crushing problems their millions of residents create, added Eisenhower, "I shudder to think what our problems will be if we must face a total population of 300 million, even 400 million persons."

Abortion Rights Asked of Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven women's groups and several well-known women have asked the U.S. Supreme Court to protect "the right of reproduction autonomy" by permitting medical abortions everywhere in the United States.

In a friend-of-court brief in cases from Georgia and Texas, the organizations and 47 women, including anthropologist Margret Mead, said they were not advocating abortion as a necessarily desirable solution to personal or social problems.

"We do contend, however," they said through a lawyer, "that each woman has the right to make the decision for herself unimpeded by restrictive laws" except for those regulating the practice of medicine.

Later this year the court will hear arguments on the Georgia and Texas cases whose central issue is whether states may continue to say which abortions are legal and which are not. Before that, however, the court must decide if it has jurisidiction to rule.

The brief said fundamental rights of women are in conflict with the laws of nearly all states. By restricting the circumstances for a lawful abortion, the brief said, women are deprived of dignity and equality and compelled to produce "vast numbers of unwanted children."

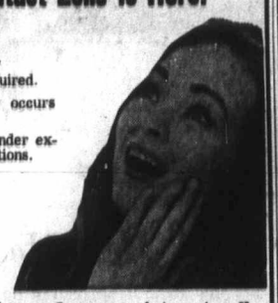

Additionally, the brief argued, legalizing medical abortions would save lives since illegal abortions generally are performed in unsafe conditions. About 5,000 women die each year from criminal abortions, at the rate of 100 deaths for each 1,000 abortions.

Price of Butter Will Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians probably will pay three cents more for a pound of butter following a boost in Canadian Dairy Commission floor prices for dairy products effective next Monday.

The commission announced Thursday it will begin paying farmers 68 cents a pound for butter, up from 65 cents. An agriculture department spokesman said the three-cent increase will "undoubtedly be passed on to consumers."

A spokesman for Island Farms Dairy in Victoria, which does not produce butter but does sell it, also said that the price to the consumer would probably rise three cents a pound.

Commission prices for skim milk powder and cheddar cheese will also be increased, but the boost is expected to have little effect on present consumer prices.

The new prices apply to dairy products sold to the commission and manufactured "on and after Aug. 16."

"These increases will permit further improvement in the prices received by dairy farmers for manufacturing milk and cream," an announcement said.

"The present price adjustments have been made possible as a result of steps taken by dairy farmers, particularly in the two major producing provinces of Quebec and Ontario, to control excess production through quotas and by improved market conditions."

The spokesman said the increase of three cents for butter now will prevent butter prices from skyrocketing when production slows in the winter months.

Labelling Dooms Ten-Cent Bar

TORONTO (CP) — The gradually-shrinking 10-cent candy bar may soon be too small for its wrapper.

Manufacturers say there's not enough room on the labels for listing all the ingredients as required under proposed federal packaging and labelling regulations.

The five-cent bar diminished in size until it almost disappeared in Canada, then was replaced by the 10-cent bar.

As chief executive of Toronto-based Rowntree Co. Ltd., Brown says that "a 10-cent bar is good public relations."

Confectioners recently have been able to keep prices of wrapped products fairly stable by reducing their unit weight to offset rising costs.

However, Brown predicts that the 15-cent bar will become the next standard. He has no timetable but believes it is inevitable.

Manufacturers say that detailed technical listing of main and secondary ingredients in both English and French would make many smaller candy wrappers illegible.

Spelling out secondary ingredients under the group name "shortening" would require 22 words in English alone.

The confectionery industry is fighting for exemptions of such listings on labels with less than 10 square inches of exposed surface area.

Brown said the industry is also opposed to fixed weights for candy bars which would force price adjustments in order to maintain a given weight.

For example, a two-ounce bar, usually selling for 10 cents, might switch to nine or 11 cents depending on price changes in raw materials.

The public does not like to pay such odd prices for convenience items, says Brown. Results were "disastrous" when some five-cent bars went to six cents.

Purex Raps 'Myth'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Purex Corp, one of the four major producers of detergents, Wednesday announced it was abandoning the use of phosphates in its products and charged many of its competitors were spreading "myths" to counteract the antiphosphate campaign

With three prominent scientists at their side at a New York news conference, Purex officials denounced phosphates as a major polluter.

The scientists declared phosphate pollution from detergents if not checked may destroy all the fresh water lakes in the country and many streams and tidal waters used for fishing and recreation in only a few years

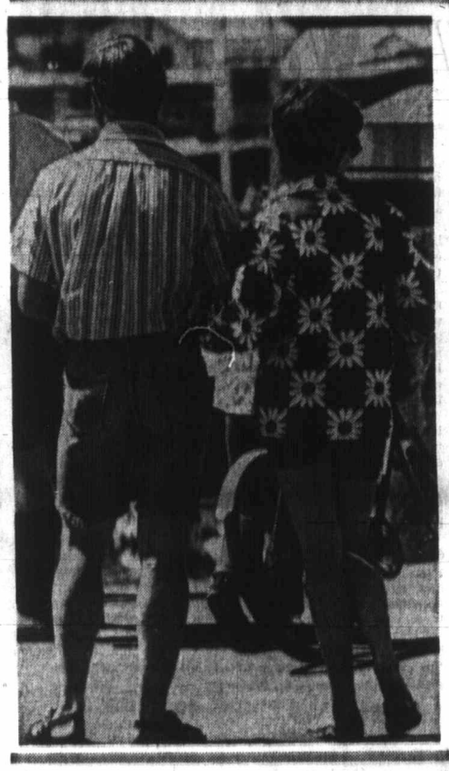

The Soap and Detergent Association in New York however said the other manufacturers could lay their hands on more scientific opinion in favor of phosphate detergents than Purex could against them and presented two observations as examples:

According to Dr Daniel Okun professor of environmental engineering University of North Carolina "The alternatives to phosphates pose unknown dangers directly to man that may be far more serious than the problems of phosphates" the association said.

The other from Dr. Robert Gosselinn a Dartmouth College pharmacologist stated "Some phosphate-free detergents are so alkaline as to constitute a toxic hazard in the home."

Purex a Lakewood Calif.-based firm with sales of $350 million annually said the other manufacturers were engaging in deceit. Such observations as non-phosphate detergents are too caustic and are not good water cleaners were "myths" Purex said.

Dr. Charles Goldman professor of Limnology at the University of California and Dr. Herman Forest biologist of the State University of New York — two of the three scientists present at the Purex news conference — said they expect the whole detergent industry to abandon phosphates either voluntarily or under legal pressure.

Shapes For Sunners

As hot sunny days threaten to disappear into clouds, cooling temperatures and maybe rain, photographer Jim Ryan takes long look around Greater Victoria to record fashions for 80-degree weather. From flashy to shabby, shorts seem to be favorites on downtown streets, for shopping or coffee or walking dogs. Bermuda shorts for men may rank right alongside hot pants if sun fights its way out into open again after cloud and cool predicted for today and Saturday by weatherman.

Dentist's Guide To Care

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a San Francisco dentist who reads your column faithfully. Every day I am appalled by the ignorance and stupidity of parents. It occurred to me that the best way to educate people is to write to Ann Landers. Will you serve as the conveyor belt between thousands of dentists and millions of parent? Here are the basic guidelines:

● Don't wait until your child has a toothache before you take him to the dentist. He will then associate the dentist with pain and establish an irreversible, lifelong fear of dentistry.

● Don't ignore cavities in baby teeth because "they fall out eventually" and don't matter. They DO matter and should be well cared for to insure the proper alignment of second teeth.

● Don't bribe your child to go to the dentist. This raises many questions and makes the child apprehensive.

● Don't insist on going into the workroom with the child. He will do better if you let him know he is grown up enough to go in without you.

● Begin early to teach your child the importance of caring for his teeth and gums. Habits established early will stay with him the rest of his life. I am not looking for publicity, so I'll sign — No Signature

Dear No Sig: Thank you for taking your valuable time to write. The teeth you save might by my grandchildren's

Dear Ann Landers: I am 14 years old (a girl) and I have a gripe rather than a problem. It's my father. Every morning I am supposed to bring him a cup of hot coffee the minute he opens his eyes and yells for it. I am also supposed to bring the newspaper and his glasses. I don't mind doing this but he is not a person who has a lot of patience, especially in the morning.

The problem is his glasses. He never leaves them in the same place two nights in a row. I never know where to look. Sometimes I look in eight places before I find them. This morning they were in the medicine cabinet. I figured it out when I found the toothpaste on the telephone table.

When I ask Dad to give me a clue as where to look he says, "There are none so blind as those who will not see!" I hate this cliche. How can I cure him?" — Chewed Over Cabbage.

Dear Cabbage: No way. Just don't ask him for any clues and he won't get the chance to chew his cabbage so many times. Some people set themselves up for aggravation.

Fact or Fancy

My neighbor Ernie insists he is completely civilized and intelligent, entirely rational and without an ounce of superstition in his makeup and to him Friday the 13th is just another day.

I challenged him on this. "Look, Ernie," I said, "If you aren't superstitious, why did you go out in the middle of the road rather than walk under that ladder when we were downtown last Saturday? And when you spilt the salt at the Cunningham's Christmas party, why did you toss a pinch of it over your left shoulder?"

"Oh, that isn't supersitition," he scoffed. "I'm just careful, that's all. I just don't believe in taking any chances!"

It is rather difficult to separate superstition from fact these days, and a superstition of yesterday has a habit of becoming verified as a scientific fact the day after tomorrow.

Around the turn of the century, for instance, a common treatment for an inflamed sore or a boil was a bread poultice, a remedy dismissed by medical men as rank superstition. Today we treat infections with penicillin, derived originally from the blue mould on a piece of bread. I am wondering now if our grandmothers' use of the bread poultice didn't stem from some ancient and forgotten knowledge of its antibiotic properties.

One powerful antibiotic commonly used in medicine was developed from a mouldy canteloupe found in an open-air market in St. Louis, Missouri. Twenty centuries ago, the military surgeons of Caesar's armies were treating battle wounds with mouldy vegetables!

One area of superstition or fact on which gardeners are sharply divided concerns the practice of planting or sowing by the moon, and as yet, no clean-cut proof, one way or another, has turned up. This belief in moon-planting is remarkably widespread and you find its advocates in every part of the world.

Many old-time gardeners in continental Europe wouldn't dream of putting a seed in the ground without first consulting an almanac. It is difficult, though, to find two of these moon-planters who agree on the correct phase of the moon or the various gardening operations.

In the islands of the South Pacific, the natives believe the sap flows upward with the waxing of the moon and downward during the wane. They believe that timber should be felled during the last quarter of the moon, otherwise the wood is too full of sap and attracts insect-borers. They believe also that crops planted or sown during the first quarter of the moon put all their energy into topgrowth, while those planted in the last quarter thrive most strongly underground.

The Polynesians, therefore, plant corn, sugar cane and seedling nut palms during the time of the new moon, but yams, manioc and other root crops during the dark of the moon.

None of the reputable scientific establishments have confirmed these beliefs and most of them dismiss the whole business of moon-planting as a lot of superstitious nonsense. The John Innes Horticultural Institute in England, though, took the problem seriously enough to run a series of controlled tests, but reported inconclusive results. The growth of plants differed with the phases of the moon, but so did the weather, and they couldn't pin anything down.

The backroom boys at John Innes are some of the most open-minded plant scientists in the world, and I seem to detect a note of dissatisfaction in their report on the moon-planting experiment. All known theory points to the fact that the moon couldn't possibly exert any influence whatever on plant growth, but I wouldn't be surprised to hear more about this as science advances our frontiers of knowledge.

No, We Won't Go!

NEW YORK, August 15, 1984 — Draft riots spread down Wall Street and up Madison Avenue today as middle-aged executives defiantly burned their draft cards and shouted, "Hell, no, won't go!"

They were protesting legislation recently signed into law by the president drafting 50-year-olds to serve in their country's uniform.

They will serve as mailmen.

"It isn't fair," cried an angry account executive. "Drafting kids is one thing. What've they got to lose? But me, what's going to happen to my agency with me away in the postal service? And my family, too, come to think of it?"

The demonstrators, however, stirred little public sympathy. For as the president had been careful to point out in signing the bill: "Prosperous middle-aged executives certainly owe their country a greater debt than 18-year-olds from the ghetto."

Moreover, both logic and precedent were on the side of the administration.

It was the failure of the Volunteer Army plan in the early '70s that set the stage. For though Congress finally raised the pay of privates to an unheard of $873.27 a month, recruits were hard to come by.

"The pay's okay," conceded one typical young man. "But the hours are long, the work's dull and you could get yourself shot. All in all, it's a lousy job."

So there was no recourse but to return to the draft. "This nation must have soldiers," said the president, "to insure the economic self-determinism of Southeast Asia, the unimpaired political hegemony of Northwest Africa and carry out the other foreign policies of this administration."

Thus the nation was driven to admit the sole reason for the draft: Being a private was such a rotten job that you had to force young men to take it by threatening to send them to the penitentiary instead.

Once the principle was acknowledged, however, it was easily extended. First came the police.

By the mid '70s a policeman's lot was sheer hell. He was reviled by students, stoned by radicals, shot at by snipers and bombed by revolutionaries. Across the country, policemen were quitting in droves.

"This nation must have policemen," said the president, "to catch crooks and carry out the other domestic policies of this administration." Thus men 26 to 40 were drafted as policemen. It seemed both necessary and fair.

The solution to The Great Garbage Crisis, then, was obvious. By 1980, the garbage had so piled up that garbagemen from coast to coast threw up their hands and quit.

"This nation must have garbagemen," said the president, "to carry out the garbage of this administration." This time, it was the turn of men 40 to 50 to be drafted.

Drafting those 50 to 60 became necessary as the mail service so deteriorated that the poor mailmen were jeered at, spat upon and bitten (not only by dogs, but by angry occupants) as they made their appointed rounds.

"This nation must have mailmen," said the president, "to carry the draft notices of this administration."

It came as no surprise, then, when the president announced plans to draft stooped gentlemen over 60, women of all ages and children from 10 to 15.

The children will be used to pick fruit; the women will scrub floors, carry bedpans and do other thankless tasks; and the stooped gentlemen will perform stoop labor.

Little protest was expected. For as the president put it so well: "Let us never forget that it is the draft which keeps us Americans free."

Hitch To Retire

The buzz around the Universal lot is that Alfred Hitchcock will be making his retirement announcement as soon as his currently-shooting-in-London Frenzy is completed. The cinema master has tipped that he wants to make one more worthwhile film, then call a final "Wrap!" to his career. I hope, for his sake and Universal's that Frenzy ends up that worthwhile work.

I didn't even know Tony had a way with the sax, but he revealed he once was a musician with evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson. In fact, says Tony, "I played saxophone and preached at Aimee's religious rallies when I was 18 years old, at the beginning of the Depression. She was one person the hungry could turn to for food, regardless of faith." And there were times when Tony was hungry back in those days.

Thinking Aloud

We tend to judge every group by its least worthy members; of the 12 disciples, by far the best known is Judas.

What we call "reality" is just the common fiction that most of us have agreed to accept; a reality of consensus, not of conception.

The word "rare" has almost entirely lost its original meaning of "fine" or "marvelous" in our time, and now means only "coming infrequently" or "unusual" (Lowell's famous line, "What is so rare as a day in June?" is invariably misinterpreted as meaning "uncommon.")

A democracy that does not generate an elite will perish of its own mediocrity; while an elite society that does not broaden the democratic base will suffocate in its own intellectual stagnation.

One of the most prescient paragraphs in Gibran's The Prophet (published in 1923) is worth pondering in this lawless era: "As a single leaf turns not yellow but with the silent knowledge of the whole tree, so the wrongdoer cannot do wrong without the hidden will of you all."

Youth doesn't need "ideals"; it needs a hitching-post to hang them on, that only the older generation can provide.

To be bored by others may be merely the sign of a restless mind; to be bored by oneself is surely the sign of an underdeveloped mind.

One supposes that the National Association of Manufacturers might condemn as a "communist" the speaker of these words: "People of the same trade seldom meet together, even for merriment and diversion, but the conversation ends in a conspiracy against the public, or in some contrivance to raise prices" — but the statement is Adam Smith's, in his Wealth of Nations, the bible of capitalism.

Speaking of prices, I don't think the public minds so much being cheated in cost as not getting value in the goods — after all, we can decide how much we want to pay for something, but it is difficult to know if even minimal value is built into the products at any price.

The most intense fear is negative, not positive: we fear not so much being repulsed from what we desire, but losing what we have attained. (Thus, the reason radicals overthrow conservatives, and not the other way around, is that the radicals can afford to be much bolder, having little or nothing to lose.)

Most flattery is self-flattery — we compliment people on those qualities that make us feel as intelligent and gracious as themselves.

Premier Bennett indicated Thursday that he may be prepared to make it possible for the drinking driver to go to school instead of jail.

He seemed thoroughly sold on the B.C. Automobile Association's contention that a pilot program tested in some 60 U.S. centres makes good sense.

The scheme is called DWI Counterattack (the initials stand for Driving while Impaired) and has reportedly been so successful over the last four years, particularly in Phoenix, that member clubs of the Canadian Automobile Association have been asking community leaders to study it.

On Thursday, the BCAA went all the way — it sponsored a luncheon at the Empress Hotel, invited Bennett and urged the province to bring in legislation that would make the program a reality here.

Bennett listened to details, watched a film with others and told the luncheon guests he would like to have all the MLAs — regardless of party — view the same film.

He said he would consider introducing the necessary legislation at the next session if in the final analysis he thought it would be required.

In an interview Bennett said: "Too many people are being killed and maimed on our highways and this program that they have actually is a good program."

He said he hoped everyone in the province would take the opportunity to see the film which will be made available to the public. He also said he was "personally in favor" of what had been done in Phoenix.

The DWI Counterattack allows the judge to order the convicted drinking driver after one offence — to attend a series of lectures and films in peace of the normal sentence or fine.

The course taken by the offender involves shock films, educational films, lectures on alcohol and driving and discussion by those in the class of the personal implications of their drinking and driving. Bit by bit, the offender gets a better understanding of himself as an individual.

R. J. Hastings of Vancouver, president of the BCAA, said the association had been assured of support "of all the judges — of every one we have approached."

The Tonilhan, a French automobile, was brought out especially for Ker's father by Thomas Plimley but before his father would buy it, the vehicle had to pass what one might think would be an easy test.

The test was for the car to make it out to the family cottage at Arbutus Bay. The auto made a valiant attempt, getting almost to the cottage but finally was stopped by a low-lying stump near the end of the road.

The car was taken back to Plimley, who shipped it back to France.

Less than a year later, the Ker family decided to try an American model which was also purchased from Plimley.

The car passed the test and remained in the family.

Ker is the first of a number of BCAA members who will be honored for half a century of membership.

He joined the club in Victoria in 1920 but owned his first car in 1916 in Britain and had his first car driving experiences six years earlier. His estimated mileage to date is 500,000 miles, without an insurance claim.

Drinking Driver Off to School?

Premier Bennett indicated Thursday that he may be prepared to make it possible for the drinking driver to go to school instead of jail.

He seemed thoroughly sold on the B.C. Automobile Association's contention that a pilot program tested in some 60 U.S. centres makes good sense.

R. J. Hastings of Vancouver, president of the BCAA, said the association had been assured of support "of all the judges — of everyone we have approached."

He said the main selling point is the fact that of 6,000 drinking drivers who have gone through the program in Phoenix alone, only 6 per cent have repeated the offence.

"We haven't any factual information on this, but this is against approximately 40 per cent repeaters for normal fines and imprisonment," Hastings said.

He said the program could best be described as both psychological and educational.

"Educators have to be trained very carefully in it," he said.

He said it was vital that the plan receive the backing of educational authorities.

"We have to get the universities developing trained personnel to give this course. This is very important. It is not a long course. But it does require very skilled people."

He stressed that alcohol is the largest single contributor to fatal traffic accidents and is responsible for half the 5,000 deaths that occur in this manner in Canada each year.

Garland Changed Man—Witnesses

Stephen Terence Garland, former manager of a Victoria brokerage firm who pleaded guilty Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court to 71 counts of theft involving more than $50 by conversion, was remanded to next Thursday for sentence after five character witnesses were heard Thursday.

Garland, 32, of 3530 Midland, Oak Bay, is being tried by Judge William Ostler. Total amount of money involved in the series of thefts involved about $95,712.

He said Garland was transferred to Victoria early 1969 and became manager of the firm's Victoria branch. From 1969 to 1971, he said Garland committed 36 thefts by conversion involving about $46,828.

All debentures, notes, interest coupons and shares, the policeman said, were taken from clients of the brokerage firm and converted by Garland for his own use.

Lloyd McKenzie appeared in court Thursday as Garland's defence counsel. Prosecutor is John Macintyre.

Dr. Norman Mellor, a medical doctor called by McKenzie to the witness box as the first character witness, told court that "I would classify him (Garland) as a severe alcoholic whose contact with alcohol at any time would be disastrous."

"He has personality defects that date back to childhood . . ." Mellor, who is affiliated with the B.C. Alcoholic Foundation, told court.

Asked by McKenzie if alcohol provides a compensatory mechanism for other weaknesses, Mellor replied in the affirmative.

Dr. I. S. Kenning, a Victoria psychiatrist, testified he first met Garland in September, 1970. Garland, he said, was complaining of difficulties in the Alcoholics Anonymous program. Garland, at that time, made no reference to the thefts, Kenning testified.

Kenning said Garland's drinking history dates back to his teenage years. He said he found it "remarkable" Garland could have worked with his heavy drinking and his judgment could have been impaired as a result.

Since charged, Kenning said, Garland has shown anxiety, guilt and depression. He said Garland has made excellent progress in the control of his alcoholism.

Rev. Charles Bishop of St. George's Anglican Church, Cadboro Bay, said he first met Garland last November. "He said his life had been a complete mess. He wanted to take steps to come clean," Bishop testified.

"I felt that he was an honest man . . . and I have every confidence he is a changed man — spiritually, morally and physically," Bishop told court.

Stephen Garland, Garland's father, from Toronto, Ont., told court he became aware his son was an alcoholic last May. The father said he recognizes his son would have a difficult future but his family "will stick right by him."

Murray Proctor, Garland's father-in-law, from Ontario, said he has had no reason to question his son-in-law's life in any way (before the charge).

"Since I came out here in May . . . he was in poor shape and unrealistic in his outlook on life," Proctor testified. He told court he has noticed a "rather changed attitude" in the defendant during the past few weeks and that the defendant shows "more willingness to face what has happened."

Proctor said he had to give his son-in-law about $9,000 financial assistance upon his arrival last May. "There were bills owning all over town," he said. Proctor said his family intends to give the defendant "all the support we can" after he has made retribution for the offences.

PROVINCIAL COURT

Two shoplifters who claimed they committed their offences impulsively were fined in Victoria Provincial Court Thursday.

"I am not a shoplifter. I am not a thief. I am a respectable citizen," J. Philippe Rousell, 49, of 1914 Sandover Crescent, Saanich, told Judge William Ostler after pleading guilty to a Saanich June 29 charge of theft involving less than $50.

The charge was laid after Rousell attempted to leave a Canada Safeway Ltd. store at 3955 Douglas with two packages of meat worth a total of $5.06 placed in the inside breast pocket of his jacket. He was fined $250.

Prosecutor John Macintyre told court Rousell stated "I've never done anything like this before." Macintyre said Rousell purchased a total of $4.67 of groceries while at the same time concealing the meat.

Rousell, in an attempt to explain the offence, told Ostler he had experienced personal problems prior to the offence. He also alleged that a quantity of meat he had purchased prior to June 29 was not fresh and a subsequent attempt to obtain a refund by producing a receipt at the store was not successful.

"I was under tension. I am not a thief and I am not a shoplifter. It is very hard at my age to have a record," Rousell said.

Ostler replied: "I'm sympathetic . . . but by the definition of the Criminal Code of this country, you are a thief. He added he believed what the accused said.

Ostler said: "There are literally hundreds of persons a year who come into this court, as you have done, who are suffering because they have a perfectly respectable background in the community and ruined their record and given themselves terrific mental anguish, but these things have to stop."

Ernest Carl Ward, 20, of HMCS Provider, was fined $250 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of theft involving less than $50. A Woodward's (Mayfair) Ltd. security official testified Ward left the store at 3125 Douglas Wednesday with a package of pins worth $3.89 without paying for them.

Ward told Ostler he took the package on impulse. Ostler replied: "The impulse has cost you a criminal record . . ."

Full-Time Legal Aid May Soon Open Office

Representatives of the legal aid committee of the Victoria Bar Association met Tuesday with B.C. Legal Aid Society director Frank Maczko in Victoria to discuss technical details of expanding legal aid in Greater Victoria, the Colonist learned Thursday.

"We discussed technical details of advancing the motion passed at the annual meeting of the association to the effect that subject to financing being arranged the association would commence a full-time legal aid office," committee spokesman Mike Hutchison said.

Hutchison said the committee discussed justification for a permanent legal aid office in the area with Maczko. He said discussions are in the preliminary stages.

He said Maczko later Tuesday discussed the matter with deputy attorney general Gilbert Kennedy. However, the association has not been informed of results of the meeting, he said.

Hutchison said the association hopes to integrate all Victoria area legal aid services into one office.

"We need a full-time legal aid lawyer who would run the office. He would take the administrative problems of handling legal aid from the hands of the people burdened with it now on an informal, volunteer basis.

"With a full-time office, we could stop calls to law firms," Hutchison said.

Hutchison said two obstacles have to be overcome before an integrated legal aid service can be offered:

- Financing for the project must be secured. Then the VBA wil be able to hire a lawyer-administrator who would take under his control all legal aid functions in the area.
- A location for the service must be obtained. Hutchison said Cool-Aid has provided space for a temporary office in its hostel at 1900 Fernwood. He said the VBA hopes to find a location within a month.

The Victoria lawyers' group has for some time operated a Legal Aid Service with two branches — civil and criminal. They are financed primarily by the profession and staffed almost entirely by volunteers.

Since last fall, it has also operated neighborhood free legal clinics on a weekly or twice-monthly basis in Victoria and Langford. These clinics, also with volunteer staff, gave more general advice and help than the regular service.

But at its general meeting in May the Victoria association passed a resolution urging financial aid from the B.C. and federal governments for a system that would give full-time legal aid here.

Monks Ghostliest?

LONDON (UPI) — If you are going to see a ghost anywhere in the world, chances are it will be in Britain. And more than likely the spirit will be a monk.

For Britain is the world's most ghostly country with monks leading the ranks of supernatural visitors, according to the new "Gazetteer of British ghosts."

The book, by Peter Underwood, president of the 109-year-old Ghost Club, lists 236 haunted sites in the country — a far from complete list, according to the author.

Monks are ghosts at 15 of the sites named, with nuns running a poor second. But nuns supposedly inhabit some of the country's most notable haunted places, including the garden of the Bank of England, said by legend to be the home of the "black nun."

Elizabethan figures are the best known British ghosts, Underwood says. Anne Boleyn, executed in the 16th century, is said by him to haunt no less than nine sites, including the Tower of London.

"These are the ones most often heard about," Underwood said in an interview, "but there are many modern buildings haunted with 20th century ghosts."

Palaces are listed as popular haunting grounds with Windsor Castle alone said by Underwood to be the ghostly home of Elizabeth I, Henry VIII, Charles I and George II.

Although he has never seen a ghost, Underwood has no doubts about their existence.

"I think the evidence for ghosts is absolutely overwhelming," he said.

Dracula Theme Reversed

SEATTLE (UPI) — A group of Seattle university students and graduates, seeking some publicity for their staging of the play Dracula, decided to stage a troupe visit to the blood bank this week — for donations, not withdrawals.

However:

One would-be donor fainted in the waiting room, another got only to the point where the needle was inserted in his arm and promptly swooned.

A woman member of the cast was judged to be too underweight to give blood and another woman's blood pressure was too low.

Visitor Tongue-Tied

LONDON (UPI) — El Vinos is a Fleet Street hostelry devoted to gentility, decorum and the sale of wine. Gentlemen there do not take off their coats, nor are they allowed to appear tieless.

Thus manager Van Hay found himself in a quandary when a customer showed up properly dressed in every respect — except that he wore no tie. Also he was a German who spoke no English.

Finally Hay persuaded the man to put on the tie, then asked what he would have to drink.

A pint of beer, said the German.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's answer — Three of the best Hitchcock movies featured villain Ray Milland and detective John Williams, Dial M for Murder; villain Richard Todd and detective Michael Wilding, Stage Fright; villain Joseph Cotten and detective Macdonald Carey, Shadow of a Doubt. Today's question is more Hitchcock. Kindly name the villains in Rear Window, Strangers on a Train and Spellbound — and add the actor who played the detective slain by Tony Perkins in Psycho. Answers Saturday.

For years, CBS was U.S. network television champion in both ratings and business. But a New York report says NBC took the lead in business during the first half of this year — with revenue of $165 million compared to $154 million for CBS and $135 million for ABC. CBS apparently is paying the price for dropping the popular big names and "rural" shows which were its trademarks and showing "relevance" instead.

My thanks to two letter-writers — the man who had the musical answers and gave me many laughs and the man who wants to avoid libel suits. To the latter: your remarks about noisy background music have been passed on.

Friday Highlights

C-5:30 p.m.—Two of the NFL's best teams, San Francisco and Miami, meet in what may be one of the most interesting pre-season exhibitions—5.

C-8:00—Today's Pan-American Games report is the only other item worth noting, which makes this a normally rotten summer day on TV—2, 6.

Friday Movies

9:00 a.m.—Ambush (routine 1950 western), Robert Taylor, Arlene Dahl, John McIntire. Don't be ambushed into watching this or most of the day's other dogs—4.

12:45 noon—Charley Moon (1956 English show-biz thing, new to me), Max Bygraves, Dennis Price. May be fair, at best—6, 8.

4:00 p.m.—Abbott and Costello Meet the Killer: Boris Karloff (1949 grab-the-money-and-run)—7.

5:00—Rescue Squad (1936 nothing). I know why Channel 13 is on the air; so we can have something to look down at—13.

C-8:00—Rio Conchos (fairly good 1964 action), Richard Boone, Stu Whitman, Edmond O'Brien, Tony Franciosa, Jim Brown. If you don't want to have to think, this is for you—5.

C-8:00—Ransom for a Dead Man (1971 private eye, today's best by far), Peter Falk, Lee Grant. Dumb detective solves perfect crime and so well it will be a series next fall—8.

C-9:00—Cannon (1971 private eye, very ordinary), William Conrad, Vera Miles. Also a series but not a winner—7, 12.

11:00—Motor Patrol (1950). See comment at 5:00—13.

11:05—Raisin in the Sun (good 1961 Negroes drama), Sidney Poitier, Claudia McNeill, Ruby Dee, Ivan Dixon. Heavy going but well done—12.

11:30—Man with Nine Lives (1940 Karloff)—7.

C-11:45—Ransom for a Dead Man (see 8:00)—6.

11:45—Curse of the Voodo (poorish 1965 English horror), Dennis Price, who can be great but usually walks through his roles—8.

11:50—Whirlpool (so-so 1949 suspense), Juliette Greco, Marius Goring. I'd say a dull book was better—2.

11:00 a.m.—I See a Dark Stranger (1947 suspense, jolly good fun), Deborah Kerr, Trevor Howard. This is the funny one in which Brigid Kerr helps the IRA, for a while—4.

1:30—Unearthly Stranger (1964 junk)—7.

1:30—Big Broadcast of 1938 (guess the year). The high-camp musical with Bob Hope and W. C. Fields has several good laughs but a lot of age—12.

Friday Radio

NOTE: The CBC has not scheduled any Pan-American Games reports.

C—Color.

Winning Contract

Sherlock Holmes never tired of listening to hard-luck stories recounted by his faithful friend, Doctor Watson, and frequently he was able to point the moral to them.

Opening lead: Seven of spades.

"Holmes," lamented the doctor on one occasion, "one would think that 29 points would suffice for three notrumps, but it seems that when I play the hand, every suit is bewitched.

"Take this deal where West led a spade. The queen, of course, lost to the king, a heart was returned, and again the finesse failed me.

"On winning the next round of hearts I laid down the K-A of clubs, hoping the queen might fall. Then I took the ace of diamonds and finessed the jack. Needless to say, this suit also proved disappointing.

"Incredible as it seems, I wound up making only five tricks. Transpose the East-West cards and I could actually have made 15."

"My dear fellow," Holmes replied, "it is true that if the hands were switched, you could make 15 tricks, but the fact is that you should have made nine in the actual case.

"You ought to have gone up with the ace of spades on the opening lead. The defenders could never take more than three spade tricks, for if West had five, East wouldn't have a third one to play through your ten.

"Thus, you could afford to tackle clubs, lose a trick in the suit, and make game for the loss of three spades and a club. Elementary, my dear Watson."

CAMPBELL RIVER — A 40-acre forest fire out of control for two days was reported to be contained and under control Thursday night by Campbell River district forest ranger Terry Brooks.

The fire, two and one half miles southwest of Campbell River is near the southern end of Buttle Lake.

It was started by lightning during an electrical storm July 27 which set many forest fires in the area. Brooks said it was first checked when it covered about one quarter of an acre but it flared again Tuesday and rapidly spread to its present size.

Thursday night, about 17 men were still working on the fire which was contained by rock slides at the sides and a fire line at the bottom.

America's Cup

Syndicate Withdraws Bid Plans

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada is withdrawing its bid for the coveted America's Cup

The Canadian challenge syndicate announced Thursday that insufficient funds were raised before a deadline date for organizing its bid for the 1974 racing series off the U.S east coast, forcing the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club-backed group to cancel

Brian MacDermott of Vancouver, spokesman for the syndicate, said one heavy backer had to withdraw expected financial support and a few other commitments also were cancelled

The group did not want to continue piecemeal with the "vast" expense of working out a yacht design and training a crew.

Hotelkeepers Default Again

Strathcona Hotel defeated rivals Seaboard Construction, 3-2, for the second straight victory Thursday night but, instead of leading the best-of-five Victoria Major Men's Softball League semi-final, the hotelmen are behind, 2-0 Strathcona, hit by a late injury and with two regular players on holiday, turned up at Central Park Tuesday night with only eight players.

Told by league president John Oster that the game would be defaulted, Strathcona used an ineligible player, Jim Moody, and, in what became an exhibition game, went on to defeat Seaboard, 3-0.

It happened all over again at Central Park Thursday night and Moody hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning to pull Strathcona from behind to the 3-2 win.

"Strathcona will be at full strength for the third game Monday night," Oster said following the second "exhibition" game.

Cablevision Wins Title

Esquimalt Junior Combos erupted for a four-run burst in the final inning at Bullen Park Thursday night but it wasn't enough to stop them being edged, 10-8, by Cablevision Juniors.

The win enabled Cablevision to sweep the best-of-three Lower Island junior women's softball final series, 2-0. Cablevision won the series-opener, 6-3, Monday night and will take part in the four-team tournament for the British Columbia junior women's title in Prince George on Aug. 21 and 22.

Forest Hills Earns Trip

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forest Hills of North Vancouver blanked Whalley, 5-0, Thursday to win the British Columbia Little League baseball championship.

Forest Hills now will represent the province in the Canadian championships Aug. 17 in St. Laurent, Que., for the right to represent Canada in the Little League world series at Williamsport, Penn.

Captain Fined $2,000

LADYSMITH — "The spilling of oil in Ladysmith Harbor has caused a dual reaction of harmful biological and moral effects," said Judge Robert Wood in Ladysmith Provincial Court Thursday.

Judge Wood was replying to a plea of guilty by the master of the freighter Olympia Faith to a charge of spilling oil into the harbor Aug. 9.

Captain Lam Sze Cheong was fined $2,000. The money must be paid before he can leave Ladysmith Harbor.

"The master is responsible for the acts of his crew," Judge Wood said, and a significant motion should be made to guard against further accidents."

Defence counsel J. D. L. Morrison told the court that the oil is thought to have leaked into number four hold of the ship from a fuel tank below the hold and was inadvertently discharged with salt water from the bottom of the hold which was filled with logs.

According to Morrison the master was not negligent and did not know of the leak until it was being cleaned up by the ship's crew under the direction of the chief engineer.

"It was nothing but a small housekeeping accident," Morrison said.

Crown counsel Doug Greer told the court of the increasing public concern and the seriousness of any spill.

"Under the law the degree of spillage is not specified," he said.

The Olympia Faith has been loading a cargo of U.S. logs bound for Japan since it anchored in the harbor Aug. 5. Its agents on Vancouver Island are Island Shipping of Chemainus.

Thieves Strike Thrice

LAKE COWICHAN — Burglars broke into three premises at Lake Cowichan overnight Wednesday, taking money and miscellaneous goods, RCMP said.

Police said that at Gordon Loutete Insurance Agency, entry was gained through an open window and $5 was taken.

At a dental clinic, $20 in cash was taken and at Bert's Barber Shop and Sales, cash, cigarettes, watches, sunglasses, cigarette lighters and some records were taken, worth about $63.

At the barber shop, entry was gained by smashing a window and then opening a door.

Gastown Riot

Injured Teenager Files Damage Suit, Cites Mayor, Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — Special and general damages are sought in a British Columbia Supreme Court action filed Thursday on behalf of a youth who claims his leg was broken by police during a riot in the Gastown area Saturday night.

Defendants in the action are the city, Mayor Tom Campbell, the Board of Police Commissioners, Police Chief John Fisk and Inspector Robert Abercrombie, who headed the police squad in the refurbished former skid road area Saturday.

The writ says injuries to Robert Stewart Elliott, 16, of Thunder Bay, Ont., were caused when he was attacked by members of the city police force.

Some 78 persons were arrested during the altercation, billed as a "Gasstown smoke-in" to protest police enforcement of drug laws in the boutique and restaurant area. Thirty-eight were charged, most of them with causing a disturbance.

Meanwhile Gastown's invitation-only block party lost its exclusive overtones Thursday and plans were being made for a gathering of thousands.

Ed Keate, a restaurant owner and spokesman for the Gastown Merchant's Association, said Vancouver city hall not only approved plans for the party but issued a permit for enough street room for thousands to gather.

Invitations had been issued to 100 policemen and their wives or girlfriends, 300 street people, merchants and the news media. The party was to have been held in a decorated parking garage. "Instead of a closed-shop party for some 700 . . . we extend an invitation to all interested parties," said Keate.

Although no demonstrations were scheduled for the forthcoming party, a series of demonstrations was tentatively planned to take place at Vancouver city hall on days of council meetings "until our demands are met."

Demands included a community-controlled police force and the establishment of a permanent civilian review board to replace the police commission.

Prophet Jones Dies at 63

DETROIT (UPI) — Prophet Jones, the flamboyant preacher who once owned a $12,000 fur coat and a 54-room mansion bought for him by his flock, died Thursday. He was 63.

Prophet Jones, whose full name and title were the Right Rev. James F. Jones, Dominion Ruler of the Church of the Universal Triumph, The Dominion of God, Inc., died at a friend's home in the inner city.

He had been in ill health since he suffered a stroke last October.

The Wayne County medical examiner's office said Jones' doctor had asked permission to keep the body at the morgue until relatives could be notified.

As Jones lay paralyzed at Ford Hospital after his stroke, some of his followers began squabbling over who should get his belongings, most of them given to him by his followers.

An estimated $2 million worth of valuables were removed from his west side house until Detroit police and the FBI entered the case to straighten it out.

During the 1950s, Jones made many predictions including one that "men will stop dying in the year 2000."

Banff Indian Days Exploit Tribe—Chief

Stony Chief John Snow said his tribe at Morley, Alta., will take steps to "actively discourage" other Indians from participating in the event next year.

Stony Indians formed the backbone of the show for 84 years until this summer when they refused to participate, protesting the amount of pay they receive. Other tribes, however, appeared with teepees and wearing costumes.

"An Indian's costume can easily cost $1,000, but all he gets for wearing it in a parade in Banff is $5," says Chief Snow.

"We intend to work through the Indian Association of Alberta to inform tribes that the Banff Indian Days exploits Indians."

Belfast Volcano Stirs

IRA Makes Peace, Ready for War

By HAROLD MORRISON from Belfast

The mounting death toll in Ulster may be only the first flash of what some Roman Catholic militants describe as a "waking volcano."

The militant, outlawed Irish Republican Army now is reported to have reconciled its opposing factions in renewed determination to oust the British forces from Northern Ireland.

Announcement of the reconciliation was made in Dublin by a senior IRA leader.

Previously the two main divisions of the IRA — the Provisionals and the Officials — were at each other's throats.

The Officials are generally left-wing and less inclined to violence than to working politically. The Provisionals are hardened militants seeking to unite the North and South through force.

It is known in Belfast that Jim Sullivan, a top leader among the officials, has so far escaped capture and is directing most night attacks against the troops.

There are reports that many Catholic men are evacuating their families from Belfast in preparation for a showdown with Protestants, police and the armed forces.

Whatever the reason, evacuation has reached an alarming rate. As many as 7,000 refugees have streamed south into the Irish Republic, severely straining the resources of the state's three million inhabitants.

The Belfast Telegraph says evacuation of both Catholics and Protestants has reached a point demanding immediate attention by the authorities. There was a growing need for food supplies, accommodation and relief workers.

The troops barricaded in sandbagged lookouts, grip their rifles and sub-machine-guns tensely. They appear weary and often angry as

Canoe Pageant Finishes Here

By JIM BRAHAN

Beauty, drama and gaiety were all part of the colorful finish to B.C.'s Centennial '71 canoe pageant Thursday night at Victoria's Inner Harbor as more than 5,000 spectators roared approval when Manitoba was declared the winning team.

Shortly after 7 p.m. the 12 Voyageur canoes, representing each of the provinces, the Northwest Territories and the Yukon, lined up abreast of the Causeway and delighted the crowd by singing happy birthday to British Columbia.

After a brief ceremony involving provincial and civic dignitaries at wharfside, a tension-filled hush fell over the throng lined three-deep along the causeway, the CPR wharf, the Black Ball ferry wharf and also the docks at Ocean Cement.

The water boiled at the crack of the starting pistol as 72 paddles flashed into a harbor turned golden by the setting sun and the 25-foot canoes streaked for the turn that would take them to the Johnson Street bridge.

There was a jam at the turn and one of the Yukon crew paddled himself right out of the canoe into the water and was picked up by a rescue craft.

The crewmember, Bob Sharp, told the Colonist after the race that during the jam the canoes were trying to untangle themselves and the Yukon crew shifted sides.

"Something happened during the shift and all of a sudden there were five on one side of the canoe and only myself on the other. I was pulling so hard I pulled myself right out of the canoe."

The Black Ball ferry MV Coho also added to the tension as it nosed its way into harbor moments ahead of the canoes flying toward the finish line. The crowd gasped with relief when it saw the racers would pass astern of the ferry.

Amid cheers, whistles, and the blat of boat horns echoing across the harbor, the New Brunswick canoe flashed across the finish line closely followed by Manitoba and B.C. Yukon sorely missed its lost paddler and wound up in last place.

Points were gained from the finishing positions of the canoes during sprints staged at each stopping point the paddlers had made since leaving Fort St. James July 25.

Overall winner of the races was Manitoba with a total of 146 points. Other positions: New Brunswick, 144; Quebec, 140; British Columbia, 131; Ontario, 126; Northwest Territories, 111; Saskatchewan, 95; Yukon, 89; Alberta, 69; Nova Scotia 39½; Prince Edward Island, 38; Newfoundland, 37½.

The Manitoba crew captained by 35-year-old Don Starkell of Winnipeg comprised Marcel Mercredie, 18, Laddie Ballantyne 27, both of Moose Lake; Gerry Hart, 23, John Rutley, 21, Jim Killick, 20, Ed Erlendson, 20, all of Flin Flon.

Starkell, Winnipeg's Central YMCA sales manager, also captained the Manitoba canoe teams during the Montreal-New York race in 1966, and the following year in the centennial canoe race from Rocky Mountain House, Alta., to Expo '67 at Montreal.

Before the sprint, Victoria's acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage was presented with a mounted beaver pelt by the Voyageurs as a symbol of the fur trade of yesteryear. Pelts were also given to officials representing the province.

Savage also received a doc-

Gunman Dies In Shoot-out

LONDONDERRY (CP) — Bursts of gunfire rang out over Londonderry's embattled Bogside area Thursday night and one gunman was killed in a street-corner shoot-out with a British army patrol.

The death brought to 25 the number killed since trouble erupted in Northern Ireland Monday and occurred when the British patrol returned fire after being ambushed.

Despite the death, this tense city seemed to have escaped the mass violence that had been feared on a day of traditional Roman Catholic-Protestant clashes.

Derry was relatively peaceful, like the riot-torn Ulster capital of Belfast, into early evening after three days of bombings, burnings and shotings.

Groups milled around mostly in the predominantly Catholic Bogside, occasionally clashing with heavily armed British troops posted here in an attempt to keep law and order.

No one here knew why this was a quiet day after riots throughout the six Northern Ireland counties since the Ulster government Monday swooped down on the illegal Irish Republican Army and took in 300 suspects subject to indefinite internment without trial.

This was what touched off the latest wave of violence, which had its origins in a

Lillooet Blaze Razes Reserve

LILLOOET (CP)—Donations of food, clothing and bedding flowed into the Lillooet Indian band Thursday as volunteer firefighters battled a blaze that had destroyed most of the No. 1 reserve and threatened the town the night before.

The sudden forest blaze covering about 600 acres had moved up to a mountain notch at the 5,000-foot level west of town Thursday afternoon.

Columns of smoke poured high into the air over the Fraser Canyon village, turning the sun a yellowish brown.

At least 50 Indians were left homeless after the fire wiped out 10 homes on the reserve 1½ miles south of here. Only three homes were saved.

"We helped each other last night and we'll do the same today and tomorrow," said Mayor Johnder Basran.

Temperatures of more than 100 degrees were not helping.

"We know the fire could jump a guard when whipped by a strong wind," said a forest service spokesman "We can only hope the fire eventually burns itself out behind the guards."

Jim Scotchman, chief of the Indian band, said residents of the reserve had little warning of the fire.

Ten homes were lost on the reserve, plus a church. About three dwellings, a recently-completed community centre and a vacant auto court on the outskirts of Lillooet were also destroyed

The village itself escaped damage when about 100 firefighters turned back the fire after it had raced 1¼ miles

Syria Cuts All Ties To Jordan

The government, in making the announcement, added that Syrian skies were closed to all Jordanian airliners.

The announcement followed a border artillery and tank duel between Jordanian and Syrian forces in which, according to a Syrian spokesman, four Jordanian Centurion tanks were destroyed.

Jordanian flights to the West now will have to be rerouted south to Saudi Arabia and through Egypt.

The action came after Syrian charges that a Jordanian patrol penetrated into Syrian territory Wednesday

TOKYO (LAT) — The Japanese government, angered by President Nixon's failure to give it any advance notice of his trip to Mainland China, said Thursday it does not want him to visit Tokyo either on the way to Peking or on his return trip.

Gorton Fall from Power Spectacular and Sudden

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — When former fighter pilot John Gorton became prime minister 3½ years ago, Australians were warned: "Fasten your seat belts."

Even if he had followed this advice himself, it would not have prevented his spectacular fall from power to backbencher in five months.

Both occasions involved the press.

Rumpus No. 1 was over alleged leaks to newspapers by Gorton indicating lack of confidence in then defence minister Malcolm Fraser. This came to a head when Fraser, after being sacked by Gorton, told Parliament that Gorton was unfit to hold office.

Rumpus No. 2 was the publication last Sunday of the first episode of Gorton's memoirs, titled I Did It My Way, in the Sunday Australian newspaper.

Gorton said Thursday after being dismissed that he was "merely replying to the misleading statements and the slanderous scribblings of some journalists."

He was referring to the recently-published book, The Gorton Experiment, by journalist Alan Reid which criticizes Gorton's style of government as a freewheeling one-man rule.

McMahon felt the reply went beyond being a rebuttal and said Gorton had breached the basic principle of cabinet solidarity.

Gorton's article said this solidarity barely existed. He said he could not trust his cabinet colleagues — or their wives — not to disclose confidential matters

Gorton also claims that Australian press barons Sir Frank Packer — for whose Daily Telegraph Reid works — and Maxwell Newton had mounted a campaign against him.

Packer, a close friend of McMahon's and best known outside Australia for his efforts to wrest yachting's Americas Cup from the United States, said Wednesday that even if 50 per cent of what Reid wrote was accurate, then Gorton should go.

In five days since the first Gorton article, the Liberal party has split with Hughes, former navy minister James Killen and former foreign minister Leslie Bury — out by McMahon Aug. 1.

Though it would require only four Liberal party members to cross the floor to bring the government down, the majority of capital commentators believe the thought of the Labor party gaining power is enough to halt rebels.

Butterflies —Millions

Vacationers report the butterflies settle across the highway in clouds. Truck drivers say they can go only 25 miles an hour through the insects.

The butterflies which began appearing about five weeks ago are identified as monarchs, regal fritillaries, queens, buckeyes, red admirals, American coppers and common wood nymphs. They hatch in the forests on 10437-foot Mount Shasta.

A ranger said they've been spotted as high as the 5000-foot level of the mountain.

"There's usually an abundance of them every three years. "They run in a cycle. But this is an unusual amount this year. I've never seen this many before," he said.

Backup Colony

Rare Condor Causes Stir

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—The sighting of a rare California condor in a remote mountain region of Baja California was reported Thursday, raising the hope of scientists that a backup colony exists for the nearly extinct bird.

Until the discovery in the Sierra San Pedro Martir, the entire population of the largest living bird of prey was thought to be less than 60.

For more than 70 years its last known nesting place was considered to be Los Padres National Forest north of Santa Barbara, Calif.

The sighting occurred on an expedition of the Western Foundation of Vertebrate Zoology, whose members brought back feathers collected at the site. The feathers later were positively identified as those of the California condor.

"We have always been concerned that the California colony might be wiped out in a single catastrophe," Harrison said.

Schools in 'Good Shape' If Building Boom Dies

NANAIMO — Nanaimo School District is in "good shape" for the 1971-72 school year as far as classroom space is concerned says trustee Joe Kilner, buildings chairman.

"We may even be able to sneak by in 1972, but if the building boom hits Nanaimo we're going to need rooms," he said.

He said the number of apartment buildings and mobile home parks being considered for Nanaimo and the surrounding area will mean a substantial increase in student population.

In order to plan for this projected growth the school board will form a committee to assess the future classroom needs of the district.

He explained that the board is at the stage where school building funds from previous referendums are running out and, "There are no new referenda going for us."

Trustee Fred White, the board's representative on the city's advisory planning commission, said Quarterway elementary school is one area where the board could have difficulties if a planned 300-unit apartment complex is approved for Hawthorne Heights.

White said it might be an idea to wait to see if the apartment development goes ahead before starting construction.

"I'd hate to see the board trapped into putting up half an activity room now and having to put up the second half in a year," he said.

However, as no definite approval has been given to the apartment development, the board will continue with present plans.

Youth Grant Projects Tangle With Management Woes

NANAIMO — John Varley, regional co-ordinator, of the Opportunities for Youth projects in B.C., was in Nanaimo this week on his second inspection tour of the summer.

Meeting with the students involved with each of the seven projects in Nanaimo, he said the projects were going well and the objectives of the program were being met.

"One of the main problems we're finding," he said, "is that people are unskilled in management but they have gained a lot of self-confidence since the projects started.

"This was one of our main objectives . . . to teach people how to create imaginative jobs for themselves instead of depending on other organizations or manpower."

Varley and his team of three co-ordinators in B.C. and three in Ottawa find accounting for expenditures is another thing students need some help with.

"There is some confusion about how to account, and that's what we can help with.

Since the projects were approved earlier in the summer, there have been complaints about dealing with the civil service in faraway Ottawa. Varley has been in charge of decentralization to a lower level.

"I'm getting to know all the kids personally and this way they are telling us their problems and just what they are doing," he said.

The projects operating in Nanaimo are especially community-oriented service projects.

These are the musicianship course, a theatre group, coffee house, children's cinema, a financial survey to determine the financial needs of college students, an attitude survey on the community service given by Malaspina College, a survey to determine what new courses should be offered by the college and a local SPEC group survey to look into future action in environmental control.

"Popular reaction to the projects has become more favorable now than it was in the beginning, but government officials are undecided whether the program will be instituted again next year," he said.

Varley visits 94 of the 300 projects in B.C. and said that the $2.37 million spent in the province is being used closer to the guidelines laid down than in any other government department.

Dual Harmful Effects

Ship's Captain Fined $2,000 for Spill

LADYSMITH — "The spilling of oil in Ladysmith Harbor has caused a dual reaction of harmful biological and moral effects," said Judge Robert Wood in Ladysmith Provincial Court Thursday.

Judge Wood was replying to a plea of guilty by the master of the freighter Olympia Faith to a charge of spilling oil into the harbor Aug. 9.

Captain Lam Sze Cheong was fined $2,000. The money must be paid before he can leave Ladysmith Harbor.

"The master is responsible for the acts of his crew," Judge Wood said, and a significant motion should be made to guard against further accidents."

Defence counsel J. D. L. Morrison told the court that the oil is thought to have leaked into number four hold of the ship from a fuel tank below the hold and was inadvertently discharged with salt water from the bottom of the hold which was filled with logs.

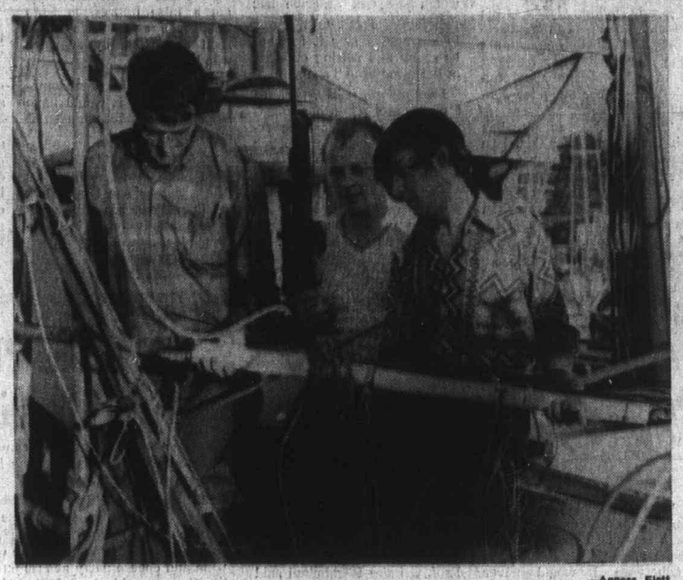

According to Morrison the master was not negligent and did not know of the leak until it was being cleaned up by the ship's crew under the direction of the chief engineer.

"It was nothing but a small housekeeping accident," Morrison said.

Crown counsel Doug Greer told the court of the increasing public concern and the seriousness of any spill.

"Under the law the degree of spillage is not specified," he said.

The Olympia Faith has been loading a cargo of U.S. logs bound for Japan since it anchored in the harbor Aug. 5. Its agents on Vancouver Island are Island Shipping of Chemainus.

CAMPBELL RIVER — A 40-acre forest fire out of control for two days was reported to be contained and under control Thursday night by Campbell River district forest ranger Terry Brooks.

The fire, two and one half miles southwest of Campbell River is near the southern end of Buttle Lake.

It was started by lightning during an electrical storm July 27 which set many forest fires in the area. Brooks said it was first checked when it covered about one quarter of an acre but it flared again Tuesday and rapidly spread to its present size.

Crofton Shows Up Vancouver Town

CROFTON — This small community probably will never forget the day during the 1971 B.C. centennial year when it put the much larger city of Vancouver in the shade. The put down happened when the centennial Voyageurs thrilled a large crowd with their arrival in 12 canoes Tuesday afternoon and the paddlers in return thanked the Crofton people for their rousing welcome and presented them with a large beaver pelt originally intended for Vancouver Mayor Tom Campbell.

There was no welcome for the paddlers at Vancouver and the canoe brigade decided to scrape off the name Vancouver on the back of the beaver pelt and put Crofton in its place.

North Cowichan Ald, Donald Morton related the story at the Cowichan Valley Regional Board meeting Wednesday night when he handed over the beaver pelt to North Cowichan Mayor Gerry Smith.

The pelt and other mementos from the various Voyageur crews eventually will find a permanent place in Crofton's museum which will be housed in the old Crofton school after it has been moved to a new location.

Fund Saves Forestry Course

NANAIMO — A grant from a private fund has allowed Malaspina College to go ahead with a forestry program that was to have been cancelled because of lack of funds.

College president Dr. Carl Opgaard said $3,500 has been received from the George Allister McKay Fund and $100 from Western Forestry Industries, Honeymoon Bay.

With these funds the college can qualify for a provincial-federal grant of $14,400 which represents 80 per cent of the capital cost of the program, he said.

McKay was a carpenter in Chemainus who willed that his estate be used for educational purposes.

Last year $600 was divided between three Chemainus students who achieved high senior high school grades and who entered the college.

Chief obstacle to the initiation of the forestry program was the refusal of Duncan and Nanaimo School Boards to agree to the college's proposal to use borrowing techniques for capital expenditures rather than leasing at high interest rates.

Opgaard paid special tribute to the education department for the speed with which the college's application for funds was handled.

It is the first time that a college program has been initiated as a result of an endowment by a private or outside organization, Opgaard said.

"It is a fairly common practice in the United States but it may be the first ever in a community college in B.C."

Teaching the course will be David Smith who has his B.Sc. and Master of Forestry Degrees.

Opgaard said there are already twice as many applications as openings for the course.

"It is interesting, in view of the attitude taken by the Duncan School Board on financing that imperilled the launching of the new program, that almost a third of the applications received to date have come from the Duncan area."

He said the course would differ considerably from the forestry products course which has been running since 1970.

The forestry program will concentrate on preparing students to enter the industry by working in the bush where they will be engaged in such activities as timber cruising, forest engineering, insect surveys and regeneration studies.

Fisherman Reiterates Fear of Soviets

Bump Prompts Rifle Threat

PORT ALBERNI — For the second time within a little more than a year, a Port Alberni fisherman has threatened to take a gun aboard his vessel to guard against being run down by Russian fishing ships.

The fisherman, Elliot Cook said in an interview Thursday a 300-foot Soviet vessel brushed his troller about 3 a.m. Wednesday about 33 miles south of Cape Beale, shearing off a trolling pole and almost struck three other Canadian vessels anchored nearby.

Cook said, "I would have fired this time, but I did not have my gun."

Cook last talked about protecting his ship with a rifle in July 1970 after another Port Alberni fisherman's boat received heavy damage from a collision with a Russian fishing ship.

A federal fisheries department investigation was to open Thursday into the incident. A spokesman for the department said Cook's complaint was the only one received by the department.

Cook said that after he was hit by the Russian trawler, he attempted to establish contact with them on a radio emergency frequency.

He said the frequency is the accepted international emergency channel, but he was not able to establish contact with the Soviets.

Cook said, "If we had been in danger of sinking here, 30 miles from shore, the Russians would not have known and there would have been no chance of rescue.

"One Russian had his head out of a porthole about five feet away from our boat when they hit us, so they knew they hit us."

There were about 20 Canadian fishing boats in the area and about 30 large Russian vessels at the time of the incident, Cook said.

Cook said the area of the incident is close to the Big Banks, closed to the Russians last year.

"The fishing was poor at Big Banks at this time, so naturally the boats go where the salmon are," he said.

The banning of the Russians from the Big Banks area has done little to ease the situation, Cook claimed, because the area is so small in comparison to the fishing grounds off the west coast, Cook said.

He said, "If the Russians know I have a gun, maybe they will give me a wide berth. Other than that, the government will have to put a 200-mile fishing limit for foreign ships into effect."

Residents Given Two Park Views

PORT ALBERNI — Residents of Port Alberni now have two statements from civic officials before them on the controversy that has developed over the parks and recreation commission budget.

Wednesday all households in the city received a statement from city council by mail outlining a majority council view on recreation costs and user charges, while in the same day's edition of the Alberni newspaper, Port Alberni Mayor Fred Bishop expressed his stand in a personal open letter to citizens.

The controversy between the mayor and four members of council developed publicly in late July when council approved a series of increases in user charges for city recreational facilities. Among the groups affected are the senior citizens' Sunshine Club, minor hockey and lacrosse, and cultural groups using Echo Centre, the city's main recreation facility.

The mayor strongly opposed the proposed fee increases and labelled them the start of the down-grading of the city's recreational and cultural programs. He voted against the recommendations but was defeated by four aldermen who favored the increased charges. Two other aldermen were absent from the council meeting.

However, on July 26 before a packed chamber, council approved a motion by Ald. George McKnight calling for a referendum in December to ascertain the wishes of the taxpayers on the issue of parks and recreation costs.

This was not the end of the controversy, for at the Aug. 2 council meeting, a statement drawn up by McKnight on the parks and recreation budget issue was approved as council's official stand on the matter and was turned over to the city management to ensure correctness of the figures and statistics.

The motion made by McKnight and supported by three other alderman called for the statement to be mimeographed and mailed to every household in the city.

Bishop and Ald. Jim MacFie voted against both the July 26 and Aug. 2 motions.

In his open letter, Bishop said that the recent controversy had degenerated into a war of mathematics and statistics that only serves to divert attention from the real issue — the justification in raising user charges for recreation facilities to save $7,500 in the operation of the parks and recreation commission. Is this in the best interests of the community? The mayor asked.

He stressed that the letter mailed out in the name of the city council in no way represents his point of view or that of MacFie.

Ald. George Dunbar, who has still one more year to serve, submitted his resignation on Aug. 2 but had it handed back to him at the Aug. 9 council meeting because he did not give a reason for resigning — as required by the Municipal Act.

Dunbar's resignation came shortly after parks and recreation commission member Bill Gibson challenged the alderman to resign and fight him at the polls on the issue of parks and recreation cost.

Dunbar has not indicated officially what his political plans will be now that his resignation has been returned to him.

The Other Side of the Welfare Cheque

By CATHY GILCHRIST

LADYSMITH — Aldon Lofstrom of Ladysmith got so depressed recently he had to write about his troubles.

Lofstrom, 42, who is married and the father of five boys can not find work and has had to resort to welfare to support his family.

"We read so much in the paper about all the terrible lazy people who live on welfare. It will no doubt do no good to tell my side of it but here goes. I have tried everything with no results," he wrote in a letter to The Colonist.

Lofstrom has tried just about everything. Since he moved to Sooke in April 1970 from northern Saskatchewan he has held seven temporary jobs. He has worked for Sooke Forest Products on the green chain and as a clerk, cooked at the Esquimalt naval base, as a laborer at Yarrows yards, teacher's aide at Cedar Lodge boys school, at the Chemainus mill, and as a gardener.

Because of an accident 20 years ago Lofstrom has had two operations and five discs removed from his back and is unable to do heavy work.

"The doctor said if I try to work as a laborer I will no doubt end up in a wheelchair," Lofstrom said.

Because he is a poor compensation risk he was laid off several jobs which he had taken despite his injuries.

Unlike some people on the welfare rolls Lofstrom is willing to work at anything. He is qualified as a bookkeeper, clerk or for general office duties, and holds a social welfare aide certificate.

Lofstrom is registered with Canada Manpower in Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo and Vancouver but the only job offer he has had is to sell life insurance which he does not feel he could do.

Ads in local newspapers have not produced any results.

Although the family has been on welfare only two months — receiving $240 each month — Lofstrom is beginning to feel that he is not equal to other people.

"You have a terrible feeling that you are really down at the bottom and don't know how you are going to get back up," he said.

—Cathy Gilchrist

Loftstrom and three of five sons milk goat

The Lofstroms came from a depressed area in northern Saskatchewan where they owned two small houses. Welfare officials deduct $85 from the family's cheque to cover the rent of the houses. The rent, however, merely covers the mortgages on the homes and the Lofstroms receive no return.

The welfare people also to the small town of 700 in want to move the family back Saskatchewan.

"But here there is some hope for me and the boys," Lofstrom said. "There, there is no hope.

"We can't even sell the houses like welfare wants us to, because there is no one to buy them."

Meanwhile the Lofstroms live in a house they rent for $65 a month, raise goats so that the kids have milk and hope that something will turn up soon.

They bought two sheep and used everything including the wool which Lofstrom spins to make yarn for the boys' sweaters. Besides the goats they keep chickens.

Lofstrom has also refurbished thrown away furniture for the house.

But now any savings the family had have been used and welfare is hesitating on their help unless the family moves.

"We keep hoping and praying and looking that I will find work soon, so we can hold our heads up and be able to live like decent people. I would go anywhere if I could get a job," Lofstrom said.

The disturbing fact is not that the family has had to accept help from public welfare but that there seems to be no work available even when someone like Lofstrom is willing and looking.

In a time of high unemployment what are the answers for Lofstrom and those like him?

Heavy Traffic Fears

Too Few Got Saddled Up To Make Bike Week Work

By DON GAIN

The idea was a good one — but it just didn't seem to catch on.

The idea was to get Greater Victoria citizens who own bicycles to ride them to work Wednesday instead of taking their cars.

It was to be part of Bike Week, sponsored by the Youth Commission of Oak Bay, to publicize the need for bike paths and bikeways in the Greater Victoria and Saanich Peninsula ares.

What happened?

"Well, it sort of bombed out," said Ronald Comber, co-chairman of the Bike Week committee. "Maybe it was too hot."

But many people might have considered bicycle riding in midtown Victoria too dangerous. Comber said several people he talked to Wednesday about the lack of cyclists commented they didn't like the idea of riding bicycles in heavy traffic.

A Colonist photographer went looking for cyclists. He found a few but they didn't look as if they were going to or from work.

It turned out that Jim has been riding to and from work on his bicycle for many years. It had nothing to do with Bike Week.

Jim's brother, Joe, who identified his brother's picture (Jim wasn't available), said he still thinks it was a good idea to try to get people to cycle to work.

He works for the provincial government and he said he sees the number of bicycles around the legislative buildings growing.

"More people are travelling abroad and getting to see them in Holland and Denmark and the idea is catching on here," Joe said.

Until Wednesday, Bike Week was going great guns.

The bike tour to Sidney last Sunday drew a crowd of 100 or more cyclists. The slow bicycle races to be held at 7:30 p.m. today on the Esplanade at Willows Beach will probably be just as popular.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford will start the races which will be open to all cyclists and all makes of bicycle. The winner will be the last one to cross the finish line, providing the cyclist has not touched a foot to the ground or veered off a straight line.

On Friday and Saturday the Capital Region Safety Council will show films at Hillside shopping centre featuring bicycle safety. The program will start at 3 p.m. Friday and will run till 9 p.m It will resume at 9:30 a.m. Saturday and continue till 5:30 p.m.

There will be a bicycle clinic, featuring simple repairs and maintenance starting at 10 a.m. Saturday. The final event will be a rally starting at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Centennial Square

Victoria Ald. Peter Pollen will welcome cyclists at the square and they will then ride down Douglas Street to the Cameron bandshell in Beacon Hill Park where Bike Week awards will be presented.

Hospital Site Chosen

The Capital region's hospital board has taken an option on 35 acres on Helmcken Road, on the north side of Island Highway, as an extended-care hospital site.

Before the purchase may be executed, it has to be approved by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark.

The extended care hospital would be from 150 to 225 beds in size. Such a centre would be constructed under the terms of the region's 1968 hospital referendum.

Students Visit From East

Groups of Ontario high school students will visit Victoria Sunday and Wednesday as one part of a program which takes them to major areas of interest across Canada. Organized by the Society for the Study of the Heritage of Canada, and subsidized partly by the federal government, the excursion is designed to familiarize the students with their country and its people.

Condition Fair After Crash

An 18-year-old Victoria girl remained in fair condition with undetermined injuries at St. Joseph's Hospital early Thursday morning after the car in which she was a passenger went out of control and hit a concrete wall in Beacon Hill Park about 3 p.m. Wednesday. Victoria police identified the girl as Leslee Campbell, 2656 Asquith, and the driver as Bart Birkland, 478 Webb Place, Luxton.

Belfast Volcano Stirs

IRA Makes Peace, Ready for War

The mounting death toll in Ulster may be only the first flash of what some Roman Catholic militants describe as a "waking volcano."

The militant, outlawed Irish Republican Army now is reported to have reconciled its opposing factions in renewed determination to oust the British forces from Northern Ireland.

Announcement of the reconciliation was made in Dublin by a senior IRA leader.

By HAROLD MORRISON from Belfast

Previously the two main divisions of the IRA — the Provisionals and the Officials — were at each other's throats.

The Officials are generally left-wing and less inclined to violence than to working politically. The Provisionals are hardened militants seeking to unite the North and South through force.

It is known in Belfast that Jim Sullivan, a top leader among the officials, has so far escaped capture and is directing most night attacks against the troops.

There are reports that many Catholic men are evacuating their families from Belfast in preparation for a showdown with Protestants, police and the armed forces.

Whatever the reason, evacuation has reached an alarming rate. As many as 7,000 refugees have streamed south into the Irish Republic, severely straining the resources of the state's three million inhabitants.

The Belfast Telegraph says evacuation of both Catholics and Protestants has reached a point demanding immediate attention by the authorities. There was a growing need for food supplies, accommodation and relief workers.

The troops barricaded in sandbagged lookouts, grip their rifles and sub-machine-guns tensely. They appear weary and often angry as

Canoe Pageant Finishes Here

Beauty, Drama and Gaiety

By JIM BRAHAN

Beauty, drama and gaiety were all part of the colorful finish to B.C.'s Centennial '71 canoe pageant Thursday night at Victoria's Inner Harbor as more than 5,000 spectators roared approval when Manitoba was declared the winning team.

Shortly after 7 p.m. the 12 Voyageur canoes, representing each of the provinces, the Northwest Territories and the Yukon, lined up abreast of the Causeway and delighted the crowd by singing happy birthday to British Columbia.

After a brief ceremony involving provincial and civic dignitaries at wharfside, a tension-filled hush fell over the throng lined three-deep along the causeway, the CPR wharf, the Black Ball ferry wharf and also the docks at Ocean Cement.

The water boiled at the crack of the starting pistol as 72 paddles flashed into a harbor turned golden by the setting sun and the 25-foot canoes streaked for the turn that would take them to the Johnson Street bridge.

There was a jam at the turn and one of the Yukon crew paddled himself right out of the canoe into the water and was picked up by a rescue craft.

The crewmember, Bob Sharp, told the Colonist after the race that during the jam the canoes were trying to untangle themselves and the Yukon crew shifted sides.

"Something happened during the shift and all of a sudden there were five on one side of the canoe and only myself on the other. I was pulling so hard I pulled myself right out of the canoe."

The Black Ball ferry Mv. Coho also added to the tension as it nosed its way into harbor moments ahead of the canoes flying toward the finish line. The crowd gasped with relief when it saw the racers would pass astern of the ferry.

Amid cheers, whistles, and the blast of boat horns echoing across the harbor, the New Brunswick canoe flashed across the finish line closely followed by Manitoba and B.C. Yukon sorely missed its lost paddler and wound up in last place.

Points were gained from the finishing positions of the canoes during sprints staged at each stopping point the paddlers had made since leaving Fort St. James July 25.

Over-all winner of the races was Manitoba with a total of 146 points. Other positions: New Brunswick, 144; Quebec, 140; British Columbia, 131; Ontario, 126; Northwest Territories, 111; Saskatchewan, 95; Yukon, 89; Alberta, 69; Nova Scotia 39½; Prince Edward Island, 38; Newfoundland, 37½.

The Manitoba crew captained by 35-year-old Don Starkell of Winnipeg comprised Marcel Mercredie, 18, Laddie Ballantyne 27, both of Moose Lake; Gerry Hart, 23, John Rutley, 21, Jim Killick, 20, Ed Erlendson, 20, all of Flin Flon.

Starkell, Winnipeg's Central YMCA sales manager, also captained the Manitoba canoe teams during the Montreal-New York race in 1966, and the following year in the centennial canoe race from Rocky Mountain House, Alta., to Expo '67 at Montreal.

Before the sprint, Victoria's acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage was presented with a mounted beaver pelt by the Voyageurs as a symbol of the fur trade of yesteryear. Pelts were also given to officials representing the province.

Savage also received a doc-

U.K. Patrol Wins Duel

LONDONDERRY (CP) — Bursts of gunfire rang out over Londonderry's embattled Bogside area Thursday night and one gunman was killed in a street-corner shoot-out with a British army patrol.

The death brought to 25 the number killed since trouble erupted in Northern Ireland Monday and occurred when the British patrol returned fire after being ambushed.

Despite the death, this tense city seemed to have escaped the mass violence that had been feared on a day of traditional Roman Catholic-Protestant clashes.

Derry was relatively peaceful, like the riot-torn Ulster capital of Belfast, into early evening after three days of bombings, burnings and shotings.

Groups milled around mostly in the predominantly Catholic Bogside, occasionally clashing with heavily armed British troops posted here in an attempt to keep law and order.

No one here knew why this was a quiet day after riots throughout the six Northern Ireland counties since the Ulster government Monday swooped down on the illegal Irish Republican Army and took in 300 suspects subject to indefinite internment without trial.

This was what touched off the latest wave of violence, which had its origins in a

Lillooet Blaze Razes Reserve

LILLOOET (CP)—Donations of food, clothing and bedding flowed into the Lillooet Indian band Thursday as volunteer firefighters battled a blaze that had destroyed most of the No. 1 reserve and threatened the town the night before.

The sudden forest blaze covering about 600 acres had moved up to a mountain notch at the 5,000-foot level west of town Thursday afternoon.

Columns of smoke poured high into the air over the Fraser Canyon village, turning the sun a yellowish brown.

Forest ranger John Wanderer said he was not yet certain the blaze won't head back from the mountain toward Lillooet.

At least 50 Indians were left homeless after the fire wiped out 10 homes on the reserve 1½ miles south of here. Only three homes were saved.

Citizens of Lillooet came rapidly to the aid of the Indians, some of whom had been housed at another community 10 miles to the north.

"We helped each other last night and we'll do the same today and tomorrow," said Mayor Johnder Basran.

Temperatures of more than 100 degrees were not helping.

"We know the fire could jump a guard when whipped by a strong wind," said a forest service spokesman "We can only hope the fire eventually burns itself out behind the guards."

Jim Scotchman, chief of the Indian band, said residents of the reserve had little warning of the fire.

Ten homes were lost on the reserve, plus a church. About three dwellings, a recently-completed community centre and a vacant auto court on the outskirts of Lillooet were also destroyed

The village itself escaped damage when about 100 firefighters turned back the fire after it had raced 1½ miles

Syria Cuts All Ties To Jordan

The government, in making the announcement, added that Syrian skies were closed to all Jordanian airliners.

The announcement followed a border artillery and tank duel between Jordanian and Syrian forces in which, according to a Syrian spokesman, four Jordanian Centurion tanks were destroyed.

Jordanian flights to the West now will have to be rerouted south to Saudi Arabia and through Egypt.

Tokyo Places Nix on Visit

TOKYO (LAT) — The Japanese government, angered by President Nixon's failure to give it any advance notice of his trip to Mainland China, said Thursday it does not want him to visit Tokyo either on the way to Peking or on his return trip.

Gorton Fall from Power Spectacular and Sudden

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — When former fighter pilot John Gorton became prime minister 3½ years ago, Australians were warned: "Fasten your seat belts."

Even if he had followed this advice himself, it would not have prevented his spectacular fall from power to backbencher in five months.

Last March Gorton, 59, cast the deciding vote against himself on a confidence motion in a caucus of his parliamentary party.

Both occasions involved the press.

Rumpus No. 1 was over alleged leaks to newspapers by Gorton indicating lack of confidence in then defence minister Malcolm Fraser. This came to a head when Fraser, after being sacked by Gorton, told Parliament that Gorton was unfit to hold office.

Rumpus No. 2 was the publication last Sunday of the first episode of Gorton's memoirs, titled I Did It My Way, in the Sunday Australian newspaper.

Gorton said Thursday after being dismissed that he was "merely replying to the misleading statements and the slanderous scribblings of some journalists."

He was referring to the recently-published book, The Gorton Experiment, by journalist Alan Reid which criticizes Gorton's style of government as a freewheeling one-man rule.

McMahon felt the reply went beyond being a rebuttal and said Gorton had breached the basic principle of cabinet solidarity.

Gorton's article said this solidarity barely existed. He said he could not trust his cabinet colleagues — or their wives — not to disclose confidential matters

Gorton also claims that Australian press barons Sir Frank Packer — for whose Daily Telegraph Reid works — and Maxwell Newton had mounted a campaign against him.

Packer, a close friend of McMahon's and best known outside Australia for his efforts to wrest yachting's Americas Cup from the United States, said Wednesday that even if 50 per cent of what Reid wrote was accurate, then Gorton should go.

In five days since the first Gorton article, the Liberal party has split with Hughes, former navy minister James Killen and former foreign minister Leslie Bury — cut by McMahon Aug. 1.

Though it would require only four Liberal party members to cross the floor to bring the government down, the majority of capital commentators believe the thought of the Labor party gaining power is enough to halt rebels.

Butterflies —Millions

Vacationers report the butterflies settle across the highway in clouds. Truck drivers say they can go only 25 miles an hour through the insects.

The butterflies which began appearing about five weeks ago are identified as monarchs, regal fritillaries, queens, buckeyes, red admirals, American coppers and common wood nymphs. They hatch in the forests on 10,437-foot Mount Shasta.

A ranger said they've been spotted as high as the 5,000-foot level of the mountain.

"There's usually an abundance of them every three years. They run in a cycle. But this is an unusual amount this year. I've never seen this many before," he said.

Backup Colony

Rare Condor Causes Stir

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—The sighting of a rare California condor in a remote mountain region of Baja California was reported Thursday, raising the hope of scientists that a backup colony exists for the nearly extinct bird.

Until the discovery in the Sierra San Pedro Martir, the entire population of the largest living bird of prey was thought to be less than 60.

For more than 70 years its last known nesting place was considered to be Los Padres National Forest north of Santa Barbara, Calif.

The sighting occurred on an expedition of the Western Foundation of Vertebrate Zoology, whose members brought back feathers collected at the site. The feathers later were positively identified as those of the California condor.

E. N. Harrison, president of the foundation, announced the discovery.

"We have always been concerned that the California colony might be wiped out in a single catastrophe," Harrison said.

Savage Scores Police for Lost Revenue

The Victoria Police Commission will seek the provincial government's help in blocking future attempts by the city's police force to "manipulate the tax resources of local government to serve their own end."

Acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage told a meeting of Victoria city council Thursday the commission would seek advise from the attorney-general and the labor minister on how to prevent loss of revenue as a result of work-to-rule policies adopted by Greater Victoria police forces during recent contract negotiations.

In a prepared statement, Savage lashed out at police for adopting tactics that "deprive the citizens of this community of the protection they require and the city of anticipated tax revenues from fines."

Savage, who as acting mayor is also acting chairman of the Victoria Police Commission, said he doesn't begrudge the policemen a decent wage, but is dismayed at the tactics with which they back their demands.

"While I cannot comprehend the logic that has led the very men in this community who are sworn to uphold the law to behave so irresponsibly as to violate their oath of office and their own union constitution in relation to a matter which is so obviously one of self-interest, steps must be taken to prevent this happening again," Savage said.

Savage told council the commission plans to seek support from the police commissions of Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay in its endeavor to block work-to-rule orders in the future.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis told the Colonist he would take up the matter with the attorney-general and with the Saanich Police Union.

The police had in fact, he said, "manipulated the law" to back up their wage demands.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said in an interview she would support the Victoria Police Commission's proposal, but only on the grounds that a police force working to rule may lose a great deal of efficiency and deprive the public of protection.

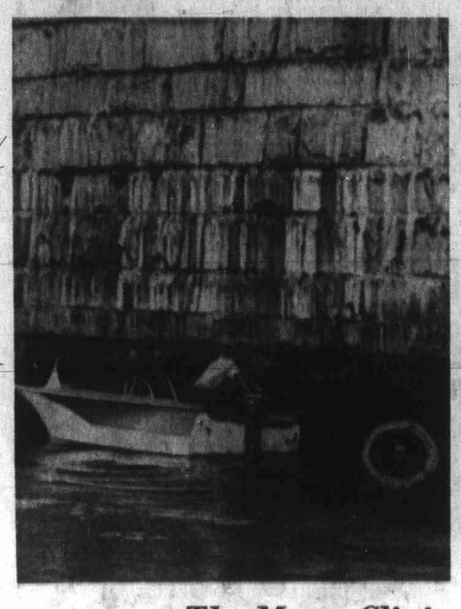

"I don't look upon our police department as a revenue-producing department," she said.

In a settlement of the wage dispute last week, police of the four core municipalities accepted a 15-month-wage increase of 12.2 per cent. Ratification by the respective police commissions is expected later this month.

The increase will raise a first-class constable's salary from $728 to $861 by Jan. 1. The contract expires March 31, 1972.

The Maya Clinic Of Inner Harbor

Loffmark Allows Overspending On Hospital Sites

The Capital Region's Hospital board Thursday was given provincial government clearance to proceed with the purchase of two important hospital sites.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark announced that he has given the board approval to buy land needed for the expansion of St. Joseph's and another site on Helmcken Road for an extended-care centre without getting the ratepayer's sanction in a referendum.

In the regional hospital referendum of 1968, voters approved $225,000 for land acquisition. However, much more money than that will be needed for the two new sites and Loffmark has exercised his statutory authority in allowing the regional board to exceed that sum.

Mayor J. B. Cumming of North Saanich, deputy chairman of the regional hospital board, said the purchase will be made from the Sisters of St. Ann, owners of the property, on a square footage basis and the sum might be close to $900,000.

The agreement is that the purchase will coincide with a number of transactions between the board, the Sisters of St. Ann, provincial government and the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society that will end with the government leasing the existing hospital to SVIHS.

It will be a long-term lease, at $1 a year but it will have clauses that will give the minister the power to terminate it on relatively short notice even if he needed legislative consent.

The second site involves about 35 acres near Saanich's western boundary and would cost roughly $348,000, including sewer extension.

It would be used for a 225-bed extended care hospital, made up of the 150 beds, that once was assigned to St. Joseph's and 75 beds that at one time were designated for St. Mary's Priory, 567 Goldstream.

There are indications that this hospital will be operated by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, using the administration that already exists at the Priory.

Greenery, More Open Space in New Proposal

Reid Down to Pair of Towers

By HUBERT BEYER

It was a day of reconciliation Thursday between Victoria aldermen and Vancouver developer J. A. Reid, proponent of the much-maligned $25 million Reid Centre.

Following a special three-hour meeting at city hall, most of the aldermen present, the developer, the city planner and the developer's architect said a great deal had been accomplished.

No new definite proposal was put forth by Reid for development along the waterfront on Wharf below Bastion Square, but aldermen hammered out a new set of guidelines for any project on the Reid site.

They also decided to strike a committee which is to work out a new design for the project that could be satisfactory to the city and assure the developer of an adequate return on his investment.

These are the new terms of reference according to which Vancouver architect Gerald Hamilton will prepare a revised scheme for the Reid Centre:

- Only two highrise towers will be permitted on the site, instead of three as previously proposed.
- Reid will either donate to the city or set aside a strip of land directly adjacent to the Inner Harbor waterfront for development as a green belt, similar to the Gorge beautification project. The public will have access to this promenade.
- The public is also to allowed access to the waterfront side of the project at Wharf Street level, above the green belt, for an unimpeded view of the Inner Harbor.
- The floor-space ratio of the development is to be limited to 3.5 to 1. This means that any buildings on the site are limited to a total floor space of three and one-half times the area of the site.

The committee, which is to work out details of a new proposal in accordance with the guidelines, consists of Ald. Harold Olafson, chairman of the city's community development committee; Ald. Peter Pollen, last year's chairman of that committee and most outspoken critic of the original proposal; City Planner Geoffrey Greenhalgh; Reid and Hamilton.

The general mood of the meeting was one of optimism. Reid said later, "This has been the best meeting in the entire two years."

Hamilton told the meeting Reid was a "most enlightened developer" who wants to build something he can be proud of.

"He's not out to rape Victoria," the architect said.

For a while, Hamilton defended his original concept. The three towers, he said, were architecturally a more pleasing composition than two towers would be.

The third tower, Hamilton said, was to have been built in the water "because I thought it was a fun thing to do."

But if council didn't want three towers, he wouldn't insist on them, he said.

It was Pollen who asked whether Reid would be willing to donate a strip of land "30, 40 or 50 feet wide" for use as a green belt.

Reid said he had no objection, but may be forced to simply set it aside for this use, rather than donate it to the city, because he had secured financing of the project on the basis of the entire property.

In any case, he said, he'd be willing to freeze the strip of land along the waterfront for use as a public promenade with trees, lawn and flowers.

Pollen, who has been credited by the developer and council with holding up the original proposal, said at the meeting creation of the promenade would be an "immeasurable contribution" to the city by Reid.

A word of caution came from Ald. Tom Christie who warned the meeting that further highrise construction would place an intolerable load on the city's present sewage system.

At the meeting, Christie voted against adoption of the new guidelines, but at a regular council meeting the same afternoon, he abstained from voting which, according to the city's procedural bylaw, means an affirmative vote.

Aldermen Hugh Ramsay, Robert Baird, Pollen and Olafson and acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage voted in favor. Aldermen Ove Witt and Percy Frampton weren't at the meeting.

Zone Law Repeal Wanted

Victoria city council has asked the provincial government to repeal legislation that gives the municipal affairs minister the power to overrule regional boards in zoning matters and deal directly with land promoters.

An amendment to the B.C. Municipal Act giving the minister the power was passed at the last session of the Legislature.

A motion urging repeal of the amendment was introduced by Ald. Peter Pollen at Thursday's meeting of city council and received unanimous support from aldermen.

Pollen said it was "extremely dangerous" to let such power remain in the hands of one man.

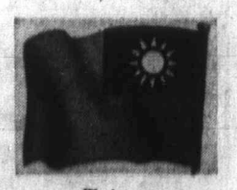

Council also decided to submit the motion to next month's convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities in Victoria.

It is past the deadline for resolutions to be considered by the UBCM's resolution committee but council hopes an exception will be made in this case.

Flags Split Rallying

By DON COLLINS

Elsewhere, it's a story of threats and fears.

But in Victoria, the main problem is reportedly one of deciding which of two flags to rally around.

Sources from the city's Chinese community say they know of no cases of threats being made against anyone for anti-communist sentiments since Canada recognized the People's Republic of China last year.

They say, however, that the new relationship has caused some difference of opinion on what flag should be flown at official functions—the flag of Nationalist China, or the flag of mainland China.

While this question goes looking for an answer, former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker is trying to focus attention on something of a more sinister nature.

Diefenbaker said in an Ottawa interview that many people of Chinese descent have told him they are afraid of coercive action because of their anti-communist leanings.

He called for government investigation into claims of harassment.

The Chinese Benevolent Association in Vancouver wrote Diefenbaker to report that two unnamed Chinese publications had threatened violent action against "remnant nationalist elements." The association also said anonymous telephone callers had carried on a campaign of intimidation.

In Victoria one member of the Chinese community said: "This is the first I have heard of anything like this."

Another said: "I'm sure nothing like this is taking place here. Victoria doesn't seem to be the centre of any kind of activity at any time."

"We're a little more civilized here," one Chinese-Canadian said.

Some said the Chinese communist element was much smaller here than it is in such centres as Vancouver.

"But the flag problem," said one source — "that's something else again. Since all of this started no one knows which flag to put up at official ceremonies.

"If you put up the flag of the People's Republic right away they will say you are pro-communist. Then, if you put up the flag for nationalist China people will start saying that this isn't right, that isn't really the flag of China."

What has been the upshot?

"Well, it's getting so people just stay away from the functions altogether," the source said.

Another source likened it to the debate that raged for a time when the new Canadian flag first came into being.

"You had your die-hards who kept arguing in favor of the Red Ensign," he said. "This may turn out to be a little the same."
